Some Answers Without Questions

The place I went to when I could not speak was also where my voice came from. Part memoir, part manifesto, Some Answers Without Questions is a rigorous and lyrical work of self-investigation. Lavinia Greenlaw sets out to explore the impulse to say something, to write or sing, and finds herself confronting matters of presence and absence, anger and speechlessness, authority and permission. The result is important and timely, a spirited and vital exploration of what enables anyone - but a woman and an artist in particular - to create and respond even when not invited to do so. Some Answers Without Questions is the result of decades of answering questions that don't really matter - and not being asked the ones that do.

One Thousand Questions (and No Good Answers)

One Thousand Questions (And No Good Answers) is a collection of poetry about losing what you thought was reality and finding a new strength within. These poems, written largely in 2011-15, have an inquisitive nature, asking what happens after the happily ever after, what happens after the ghost has gone into the light. Above all, these poems are about love, enduring the relentless wind and the healing rain, finding therapy in the silent frost, and soothing in the new sun. This is the heartbreak and the healing. Her work is on Instagram @_SarahHerrin.

Twenty Questions: Feeling Ways Toward Answers Through Poetry

Life's questions, both profound and trivial, can hit us full force and send our philosophies tumbling and dissolving into separate grains of perceptions. Putting those perceptions back into cohesion is the work of poets. These twenty poems, written over the course of five decades, attempt to do just that.

It's a Wednesday

This book has been some twenty-three years in the making. One of the poems included in this book I remember writing for my seventh-grade English class and the rest were written sometime between then and now. This compilation also includes the 2006 Editor's Choice award-winning poem aWhat You Deserve, as chosen by the International Society of Poets and Poetry.com. Although many of these works are not the most happy collection of thoughts that you have ever read, each and every one of them contains at least a bit of the truth and it is up to you to decide how much is true in your life experiences. Again, I hope that you enjoy reading these insights to my life as much as I have enjoyed putting them on paper and sharing them with you. aCarey F. Grimstead

Poetry and Phantasy

Nothing seemed to escape the eyes of Philip Larkin, a contemporary English poet who achieved acclaim on the strength of a small body of work. While lyrically exploring the human experience, Larkin's candid perceptions were enlivened by his acute power of observation—a unique literary talent that prompted his recognition as England's other Poet Laureate. In a fascinating quiz book that will appeal to both Larkin scholars and lovers of poetry and literature, retired English professor M. R. Sethi shares more than six hundred questions (with answers) that offer an opportunity to test knowledge regarding the life and works of the famous poet. Scholars and others will be tested on Larkin's physical shortcomings, his first jobs, what he wore while mowing the lawn, why he once threatened to jump out a window, who was not one of his friends at Oxford, and much more that includes detailed questions regarding many of his poems. So You Think You Know Philip Larkin? is a volume of questions and answers shared to test the knowledge of both scholars and poetry and literature aficionados about a famous, contemporary poet.

Moon on the Tides

How is one to speak with the dead? Why should you turn? Is this an apple? Anyone for tea before night falls? Tell me, what is it you plan to do with your one wild and precious life? With these questions, plucked from the poems of writers whom she admires, Alison Pick fashions "answers:" extraordinary meditations on life and death, love and work, happiness and sorrow. The book includes a remarkable sequence about the poet's discovery as a teenager of her father's Jewish ancestry. Alison Pick is the winner of the 2002 Bronwen Wallace Memorial Award for the best unpublished writer under 35. The jury wrote: "The poems prove once again that poetry generates poetry ... that literary excellence fuels excellence in the generations that follow." By turns spiritual and earthy, accessible and complex, thoughtful and wrenching, Question & Answer announces the arrival a brilliant new poetic voice.

Black & White Answers: The Soul Speaks

... Is it too late to try or are you a bird that's still waiting to fly? Are you finally your ally or still an enemy you can't identify? Why can't your dreams become a part of your reality? Do you see your potential or only a technicality? In a collection of thoughtful questions presented as rhyming poetry, Gregory Hightower challenges others to contemplate their lives in the past, present, and future, and instigate positive change in the process. Hightower, a military veteran who has been writing poems for years, relies on his own life experiences to formulate poetic questions that encourage self-reflection about the pursuit of dreams, points of view, personal happiness, authentic friendships, character and attitude, superficial behaviors, physical abuse, and bullies. In this unique collection of verse, an American poet offers introspective questions that invite others to explore the meaning behind their lives and look deep into their conscience for the answers.

Black & White Answers

This modern, thought-provoking collection encourages the reader to examine the twenty-first century lifestyle and its meaning... or lack of it. Dealing with themes familiar to all; such as technology, nature and the environment; the poet captures the climate of our age, reminding us that there is more to life, if only we could take the time to see it. V J Ray writes with an insight and, above all, a passion for humanity, which cannot fail to move the reader to really consider the consequences of our actions today on the people of tomorrow. The author is a medically qualified person with a background in basic scientific research, hence the scientific bias in some of the subjects, but only when it serves the purpose of highlighting a problem of widespread concern, but without unintelligible jargon. On the whole these poems cover a wide range of subjects, and the author hopes that they will appeal to a universal audience.

Poetry Comprehension, Grades 6 - 8

'Poetry that recognizes the miracle of life'. Life takes us on various journeys the author calls dances. As human beings, we are in a constant state of emotional limbo sometimes so completely engrossed in our own lives, that we become oblivious to the hate, death, illness, war, greed and materialism around us. We often end up ignoring the simple yet important human values of love, peace, acceptance, tolerance and forgiveness. Our ties of love are as easily severed as the bonds we share with the rest of humanity. This collection of poetry represents a cry against the decline of inherent human values like love, kindness, acceptance, and perseverance. It shouts out against war, excess, hate and what the world has become. It is a collection that represents an uprising from the heart of humanity. The ultimate message in the poetry is to cherish, love and respect each other and oneself despite grievances, to hold fast to the ties of love despite disagreements and to forgive, accept and carry on despite upsets and difficulties, thus promoting inner and universal Peace. The poetry is not just of love, but also of living life daily with its 'ups and downs' and bringing to light the darkness, inspiring an 'uprising' of human emotion and devotion. The poetry represents this uprising. It is evocative, reflective and contemplative in its progression from darkness to the light.

The Hidden Answer

The first poem in all the books of my series. What was Given There was a field with a path Or was it a path through a field It's not a choice to find the field The field that has its own path It's a choice to go down it It's a choice to go through it We awake to the day We obey our own way We don't choose our day We don't choose our own way We are what we are We are our own history traveling forward So a child stumbles And a man is humbled For it wasn't long ago That a man found a field He wasn't looking for it He wasn't in need of it Still he had found a field A field with its own path So he chose to go down it He chose to go through it Why would we say That he chose his own way Why would we say That it's his own natural way The day began and brought the man into it The world gave the man his own way to obey The man stumbled As the man made his way through the field The man stumbled As the man made his way down the path The path through the field The boy who asks into the night "Why am I alive?" again seeks answers. Here in the second story he is confronted by the truth of his World. "What can I do? I'm overwhelmed, my life, my choices . . . I feel like I'm only here to find my end." The Voice "I'm here for you. Sometimes that's all we can be. The World is a place of many ends and many beginnings. It provides many ways for man to know and go forward into. One man cannot know another man's heart, but a man can learn to love all who are of the World. A child must learn many things to understand what it is to be alive. A man also must grow to understand how the World can allow for its own nature. A man must know what the World is. The World changes as man creates it. The World changes as it raises another generation to become those who shape it." The man awoke and was again kneeling, one hand on the ground, one hand clenched. He rose and began to go forward.

Perfect Answers to Silent Questions

Who Was Cousin Alice? & Other Questions attempts to answer both the first question posed in the title about American poet John Matthias' early family memories, and then to raise and engage, in a series of memoirs and critical essays, a large number of "other questions." These range from an attempt to find some answers about his wife's British family in 'Kedging in Time', an essay-memoir first published as an afterword to his long poem, Kedging, about the Adams and Young families during and after World War I, to memoirs inquiring into "Poetry and Insomnia," "Poetry and Murder," and the literary imaginations of "Grand Old Dirty Old Men"-Yasunari Kawabata, Gabriel Garcia Marquez, and Octavio Paz, among others-an examination of erotic writing of the old and aging as a manifestation of "late style." Specifically literary essays include considerations of W.H. Auden, Benjamin Britten, Roy Fisher, Paul Muldoon, John Berryman, Robert Hass, Robert Pinsky, Michael Anania, and "British Poetry at Y2K." In this hybrid mix of genres-both very recent work and a selection of pieces culled from the last twenty-five years-Matthias has added a number of poems that enter into a dialogue with his essays and memoirs. Guy Davenport has said that Matthias' prose "is written in a congenial and civilized style," and that while he "writes for a general audience that reads," his work, taken together, constitutes "a critical tour de force." In 2010 Shearsman published Matthias's most recent book of poems, Trigons. As Cousin Alice appears, Salt is publishing a critical Companion to the Poetry of John Matthias edited by J.F. Doerr.
