When Christians Were Jews: The First Generation - When Christians Were Jews: The First Generation by St Mary's University, Twickenham 33,300 views 4 years ago 1 hour, 43 minutes

The Jesus Movement Is Not the Only Messianic Movement in First Century Judea There Are Other Movements of People Who Want To Be Kings as Josephus Says and King Is a Greek Word for Messiah Rome Keeps Putting Them Down Finally There's an Open Revolt When a Son of a Chief Priests Stops Sacrificing for the Well-Being of the Empire and the Emperor in Jerusalem's Altar and the Whole Country Breaks Out into Revolt Josephus Who's a 28 Year Old Man Who Had Been a Priest in the Temple Is Sent to the Galil To Defend the North because the Romans Are Going To Come Down from Antioch

There Is Later Fourth Century Traditions that that Community Had Fled before the Destruction of the City I Think that's Exactly What that Is Is a Much Later Tradition the City Itself Is Pulled Down and There's a Sense in Which the Apocalyptic Prophecy of this Generation Was Right but the Apocalypse Was Initiated Not by God but by Titus the Movement Survives in the Diaspora and in the Galil but Jerusalem Itself Is the Smoking Epicenter of this Messianic the the Destructiveness of the Messianic Conviction Brushing Up against Roman Power Politics Josephus Says and I Think I Have the Quotation

I Do Wonder if It's Possible To See More Coherent in the Sense that It Fits with Early Perceptions of G over Jesus Who Is Not Opposed to the Temple's Ideal Function but Did Dispute some of the Ways It Was Being Run this Passage Is Not about Protesting Sacrifices but I Think the Passage Could Be Seen as a Critique of How Sucker Faces Were Being Run How the Sacrificial System Was Being Run and for the Action Perhaps Being Less Dramatic than It's Often Seen Given the Context Focuses on Dove Sellers and Money Changes I Think We Should Take Seriously that this Action Is Understood as an Economic Critique and Politics Discuss some of this
