Your baby does not get confused when you hide his toy under something and understands by now that he can reach it by moving away what is hiding it.

Shows improvement in visual memory and the ability to recall information.

Knows how to comb his hair with his comb

Knows which side of the phone to hold to his ear.

Your baby can pull himself into a standing pose and remain like that for a few seconds.

Can try walking without support now.

Is able to use a number of grips, using his fingers, thumbs and hands.

Increase in hand-eye coordination.

Your baby can now understand simple instructions and requests.

Starts to imitate the words that you say.

Starts to use exclamations like "Uh Oh!"

Shakes his head in a firm "No" to express displeasure or something the child does not want to be involved.

Your baby will hold on tightly to you if something scares him.

When confronted with new people, your baby may become shy and panicked.

As your baby develops social bonds, he will begin to show preferences towards certain people.

He enjoys imitating others in play.

1. Baby can distinguish taste and has a major food preferences.

1. Baby's physical activity increases with more playtime

1. Read to your child using interactive picture books.

2. If you describe to your baby what you think he feels, it will help him understand emotions.
