Journey to Tibet

Padmasambhava was invited to Tibet to establish Buddhadharma there and to subjugate the local spirits who were creating obstacles.

Without any delay Padmasambhava crossed the Tibetan-Nepalese border and began his journey to Central Tibet.

On the way, Padmasambhava met many local spirits, gods and demons of Tibet.

There are many stories of how Padmasambhava subjugated Tibetan gods and demons.

One of the stories describes how the yakshas gathered all the icy winds into one and tried to blow them on Padmasambhava.

But Padmasambhava just spun a wheel of fire on the tip of the fingertip of his threatening gesture and all the snow mountains where these yakshas lived melted like butter touched with a red-hot iron. offered the core of their lives and were bound under oath.

Padmasambhava subjugated also all the rock water and mountain spirits.

Finally, Padmasambhava brought all the gods and demons of Tibet under his command.
