Archives of Dermatology and Syphilology; Volume 5

Excerpt from Archives of Dermatology and Syphilology, 1920, Vol. 2: Succeeding Vol. 38, 1919, the Journal of Cutaneous Diseases Lichen nitidus was first described by Pinkus,¹ in 1901, and in an exhaustive paper On the subject, which he Contributed to Neisser's Festschrift, in 1907, the Berlin dermatologist gave a detailed clinical and histologic report of nine cases Of the disorder. Since that time, examples have been recorded by Arndt² Kyrle and mcdonagh,³ Reines⁴ and Bachrach,⁵ in England and on the Continent, and by myself⁶ in this Country. It is probable, as Pinkus has suggested, that the disorder is not nearly so rare as the literature would indicate. Owing to the absence Of subjective symptoms, many cases are undoubtedly overlooked. A.M.A. Archives of Dermatology and Syphilology

Excerpt from Archives of Dermatology, Vol. 6: A Quarterly Journal of Skin and Venereal Diseases According to the notes recorded on December 1 she had lost about thirty pounds since September. She began to have a nightly fever, together with flushes of intense heat and burning in the palms and soles, followed by copious perspiration and general debility. These symptoms manifested themselves gradually and continued almost uncontrollable for a month. An attack of suppression of urine lasting thirty-six hours, followed by a violent outbreak of urticaria, similar to an experience six months previously, occurred during the latter part of November. Archives of Dermatology and Syphilology, 1920, Vol. 2

Excerpt from Archives of Dermatology, 1877, Vol. 3: A Quarterly Journal of Skin and Venereal Diseases A Special Journal, devoted to a branch of medicine which has been so much neglected as Dermatology by the profession at large, must create for itself a position, and command its own audience, which it must in a measure educate up to its standard; this of course refers only to the general practitioners, who have not devoted any Special thought or study to the branch. The aim of the archives OF dermatology has been to meet the wants Of the General Practitioner, and to serve as a means Of communication between the specialist, whose whole time and thought are devoted to Skin or Venereal Diseases, and those in general practice, that the daily-gained experience Of the latter may reach the former. TO this end the Editor and staff have endeavored to include within its pages reference to everything which has been reported elsewhere in these departments during the year, in addition to the large amount of original matter which has filled more than one half of the Journal. Many Of the original articles have undoubtedly been very special in their character, and considerable of the matter digested from other journals has been purely scientific, but it must be borne in mind that it is impossible to render the entire subject of Dermatology clear and interesting to those unacquainted with more than its rudiments, and that the Archives is designed to serve as a compendium of knowledge in this branch for those engaged exclusively in it, as well as an assistant to the general practitioner in managing these diseases. Archives of Dermatology, Vol. 6: A Quarterly Journal of Skin and Venereal Diseases (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Archives of Dermatology, Vol. 3: A Quarterly Journal of Skin and Venereal Diseases; July 1877 Through the kindness of Dr. Fox, who showed me several examples of the affection at his clinic in University College Hospital, and drew my attention to its characteristic diagnostic characters, I was acquainted with the disease whilst studying in London, and in this city I have seen a considerable number of mild cases of the affection. I have had also a most excellent example of the disease in a patient who has been for some time under my observation and care, and from whom the material was obtained which now enables me to discuss the disease and to decide as to its true nature. Archives of Dermatology, 1877, Vol. 3

Excerpt from Archives of Dermatology and Syphilology, 1920, Vol. 1: Succeeding Vol. 38, 1919, the Journal of Cutaneous Diseases Although the monumental work of Sabouraud and his followers has thrown a flood of light on the whole subject Of ringworm in the past twenty - five years, this light has shone chiefly for the dermatologist and in some instances apparently rather dimly for him. The general practitioner still gropes in Cimmerian darkness; for him ringworm is still nothing more than bald, scaly patches on the scalps of children or scaly rings on the non-hairy surfaces; eczematoid ringworm and the deep inflammatory trichophytoses Of animal origin do not exist for him - they are a term incognita Whose borders he has not even seen, let alone entered on. It is only by the persistent reporting the less common forms Of the disease that we can hope to teach him that infection by the trichophyton and other nearly related fungi may produce cutaneous diseases with widely varying symptoms presenting none Of the clinical features commonly associated with ringworm, and that such infection occasionally produces severe inflammatory symptoms and even, in rare instance, destruction of tissue. It is partly for this reason, but more especially because they present some features of unusual interest to the dermatologist, that the two cases here described. Archives of Dermatology, Vol. 3: A Quarterly Journal of Skin and Venereal Diseases; July 1877 (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Archives of Dermatology and Syphilology, 1922, Vol. 6 Crocker¹ reported a case of erythema multiforme in which the mouth alone was affected, and which showed attacks of bullous aphthae beginning on the buccal mucous membrane, and Spreading over the tongue and mouth Without any Skin lesion. The affection occurred every two or three months. After being under Observation for over a year, erythema iris lesions appeared on the back Of the hands in one attack, and the patient then remembered that he had had a similar attack some years before. SO far as I can determine from a review of the literature and current textbooks, there are no other reports of cases of erythema multiforme confined to the mucous membranes. Archives of Dermatology and Syphilology

Excerpt from Archives of Dermatology, Vol. 3: A Quarterly Journal of Skin and Venereal Diseases; April, 1877 As the next best recognized and most clearly defined clinical class, with a beginning of histological support as far as relates to herpes zoster and trophic disturbances, we place the Neuroses of the skin, a class which is continually being more and more clearly defined, and which receives recognition in many classifications. The remainder of the classes, as also most of the diseases under them, correspond to those of Hebra, with certain exceptions. Thus, his class of Anaemia, or anaemic affections, which I have never ob served clinically, if it exists at all, does not find a place here also his two classes of benign new formations and malignant new for mations are united in our ninth class; and his class of Ul cera cutanea, which includes the primary venereal ulcers and vari cose and other ulcers of the leg, is also omitted; thus the pres ent arrangement has but nine classes instead of twelve, as proposed by Hebra. With this much of introduction the classification is presented, after which the principles of Nomenclature and their application in this scheme may be considered. A.M.A. Archives of Dermatology and Syphilology

First published in 2004. These four classic masterpieces in esoteric research by the noted orientalist - M. Penzer explore customs and traditions from other cultures and periods of history which, for all their apparent strangeness, mask fundamental subjects of continuing interest. The first concerns the motif of the poison damsel -- the beauty who dealt death in many forms to her admirers - which originated in India, was prevalent in medieval Europe, and persists today in the belief of the femme fatale. The volume includes a study in the ancient Tale of the Two Thieves, an essay on sacred prostitution in India, the ancient East and West Africa, and an exhaustive treatment of the custom of chewing the betel or areca nut which is widespread in the far East from India through Indonesia to New Guinea. A natural stimulant and narcotic whose effects are similar to that of tobacco, betel is of growing interest to the medical world, and has, as the author shows here, a rich legacy of customs and belief.
