Foreign Direct Investment - Foreign Direct Investment by Michael Nugent 42,110 views 10 years ago 57 minutes - chapter 8.

Intro

O Both the flow and stock of FDI in the world economy have increased over the last 35 years OFDI has grown more rapidly than world trade and world output because

O Since World War II, the U.S. has been the largest source country for FDI Other important source countries - the United Kingdom, the Netherlands, France, Germany, and Japan Chinese firms have recently emerged as major foreign investors

O Most cross-border investment involves mergers and acquisitions rather than greenfield investments

O Acquisitions are attractive because: They are quicker to execute than greenfield

Limitations of Exporting - an exporting strategy can be limited by transportation costs and trade barriers When transportation costs are high, exporting can be unprofitable Foreign direct investment may be a response to actual or threatened trade barriers such as import

Limitations of Licensing - internalization theory (also known as market imperfections) suggests 1.

Licensing could result in a firm's giving away valuable technological know-how to a potential

Advantages of Foreign Direct Investment - OFDI will be favored over exporting when: Transportation costs are high

Strategic Behavior O Knickerbocker explored the relationship between FDI and rivalry in oligopolistic industries industries composed of a limited number of large firms FDI flows reflect strategic rivalry between firms O This theory can be extended to multipoint competition (when two or more enterprises encounter each other in different regional markets, national markets, or industries)

The Product Life Cycle O Vernon-firms undertake FDI at particular stages in the life cycle of a product they have pioneered

O Ideology toward FDI has ranged from a radical stance that is hostile to all FDI to the non-interventionist principle of free market economies Between these two extremes is an approach that might be called pragmatic nationalism

O The radical view - the MNE is an instrument of imperialist domination and a tool for exploiting host countries to the exclusive benefit of their capitalist-imperialist home countries O The radical view has been in retreat because of: The collapse of communism in Eastern Europe The poor economic performance of those countries

O The free market view - international production should be distributed among countries according to the theory of comparative advantage

O The pragmatic nationalist view - FDI has benefits, (inflows of capital, technology, skills and jobs) and costs (repatriation of profits to the home country and a negative balance of payments effect) FDI should be allowed only if the benefits

Resource Transfer Effects O FDI can bring capital, technology, and management resources that would otherwise not be available 2. Employment Effects O FDI can bring jobs that would otherwise not be created there

Balance-of-Payments Effects O The balance-of-payments account records a country's payments to and receipts from other countries O The current account records a country's export and import of goods and services

Effect on Competition and Economic Growth O FDI in the form of greenfield investment: Increases the level of competition in a market Drives down prices

Adverse Effects on the Balance of Payments There are two possible adverse effects of FDI on a host country's balance-of-payments: 1. The capital outflows as foreign subsidiaries repatriate earnings to the parent country 2. There is a debit on the current account of the host country's balance of payments associated with imports of input products by the foreign

National Sovereignty and Autonomy O FDI can mean some loss of economic independence

The benefits of FDI to the home country include: 1. The effect on the capital account of the home country's balance of payments from the inward flow of foreign earnings 2. The employment effects that arise from outward FDI 3. The gains from learning valuable skills from foreign markets that can subsequently be transferred back to the home country

The balance-of-payments The balance of payments suffers from the initial capital outflow required to finance the FDI The current account is negatively affected if the purpose of the FDI is to serve the home market from a low-cost production location

O International trade theory - home country concerns about the negative economic effects of offshore production (FDI undertaken to serve the home market) may not be valid FDI may actually stimulate economic growth by freeing home country resources to concentrate on activities where the home country has a comparative

... Inward FDI, O Governments offer incentives, to foreign ...

2. Restricting Inward FDI O Ownership restraints - exclude foreign firms from certain sectors on the grounds of national security or competition

O Until recently there has been no consistent involvement by multinational institutions in the governing of FDI O The formation of the World Trade Organization in 1995 changed this The WTO has had some success in establishing a universal set of rules to promote the liberalization

European Union and the Race for Foreign Direct Investment in Europe

Countries create different type of incentives for foreign firms, such as; direct incentives/subsidies, tax relief, soft loans and preferred handling. This volume aims to analyze the impact of European Union on inward foreign direct investment in Europe and to discuss what type of effects are being created by this race for FDI.

Policy Competition and Foreign Direct Investment in Europe

First published in 1999, this volume recognised how widespread attention has been given to charting how the global rise in investment flows has caused numerous changes in the operation of economies – such as the globalisation of production and increasing international economic interdependency. Less research has been made on the role of government policy in promoting FDI. This book, based on a report for the OECD Development Centre, examines the rising competition between European governments to attract mobile investment projects and its impact on the use of different policy areas to influence FDI decisions.

EU Framework for Foreign Direct Investment Control

Companies engaged in FDI or financial services will appreciate the detailed analysis of issues raised by this new EU policy instrument. This book is supposed to improve the practitioners' understanding of the EU regulatory layer now coming on top of FDI screening at the Member State level. Practitioners active in competition law, particularly mergers and acquisitions, will welcome this clear commentary and analysis of a crucial component of EU policy in the related areas of trade and investment, and policymakers will be encouraged to consider whether further regulatory changes are called for.

Foreign Direct Investment in Europe

This book provides authoritative academic and professional insights into the effects of foreign direct investment (FDI) on home and host countries. It highlights global trends and patterns, and explores related policy challenges all with a special focus on the countries in Central, Eastern and South-Eastern Europe. The book cuts through the existing data fog by offering a wide range of up-to-date academic findings and institutional expertise. Those findings are rounded off with lessons to be learned from historical developments (Ireland's success story), an evaluation of current trends (the role of China) and an investment promotion agency policy for attracting sustainable investment (CzechInvest). Contributions made by central bank officials, institutional representatives, members of academia and professionals provide for a uniquely complementary view on FDI developments and their implications. At a time of big changes in the FDI landscape, this book offers both empirical and econometric evidence on foreign direct investment and will be of great interest to economists and other experts in the fields of economic policy and European integration from central, commercial and investment banks, governments, international organizations, universities and research institutes. The special focus on FDI will attract those interested in, or directly involved in tackling the challenges of attracting sustainable investment or investing successfully abroad.

Closing the EU East-West Productivity Gap

A product of the Framework V research project, this book addresses one of the key problems facing the EU today: Why is the 'new' EU so much poorer than the 'old', and how will EU enlargement help to solve the problem? Focusing on the productivity problems underlying the East-West gap, it looks in particular at the role that foreign investment and R&D can play in closing it. Against that background, the book assesses what role proactive development policy might play in attacking the roots of low social productivity. Concluding that there will be a clear-cut process of convergence between East and West, albeit an incomplete one, it finishes with an assessment of the patterns of competitiveness, East and West, that are likely to emerge from this process of incomplete convergence. The material is based on a rich archive of empirical material which no competing title can match, and combines in-depth interviews with standard quantitative approaches and critical policy analysis. Contents: Introduction: Productivity and Social Capability — A Historical and Analytical Framework (D A Dyker & L Iacovone) Identifying the Channels and Mechanics of FDI-Induced Technology Transfer (D A Dyker et al.) Strategies of Multinationals and Competition for Foreign Direct Investment

Is there a trade-off among countries in attracting foreign direct investment (FDI)? And, in particular, has the opening up of Central and Eastern Europe diverted FDI that otherwise would have gone to developing countries? To answer these questions, FIAS c

Five Years of an Enlarged EU

The Fifth Enlargement that took place in 2004 and 2007 was a milestone in the history of the European Union. Not only because of the large number of acceding countries but also because of their recent political and economic experience. Ten of them had undergone a profound transition from a totalitarian regime to democracy, and from a centrally planned economy to a market-based system. Most of them had income levels significantly below those of the then EU-15. Now, 6 years later, we can clearly see that the process of European integration, both before and after 2004, was what enabled Europe to overcome the gaps between various parts of the continent. The enlargement made Europe a better and wealthier place and strengthened its position in the world. Integration into the European Union has always been one of the strongest incentives for reform in the new Member States. Particularly important in my view have been the development of financial markets through foreign direct investment and capital inflows, and the opening of labour markets – which was a two-way phenomenon, with markets being opened up in acceding as well as the incumbent Member States. The Fifth Enlargement was thus an exercise of globalisation in miniature, a practice run for the Union to tackle the challenges of the ever smaller world.

Protection of Foreign Investments in an Intra-EU Context

The Achmea judgment revolutionised intra-EU investment protection by declaring intra-EU bilateral investment treaties (intra-EU BITs) incompatible with EU law. This incisive book investigates whether intra-EU foreign investments benefit from this alteration, which discontinued the parallel applicability of intra-EU BITs and EU law in the EU internal market. In addition to comparative legal analysis from an investor perspective, Dominik Moskvan puts forward a proposal for a creation of a permanent intra-EU foreign investment court to ensure a balanced economic development of the EU internal market.

Integration Through Foreign Direct Investment

'This book... represents a very valuable contribution to the literature on the role of FDI in development in Central and Eastern Europe. It is therefore a must for both scholars and practitioners who are involved in foreign investment in economies in transition.' - Marjan Svetlicic, Transnational Corporations 'The book goes a long way toward understanding a host of key issues related to the emerging pattern of MNC-cum-host collaborative growth in Central and Eastern Europe.' - from the foreword by Terutomo Ozawa, Colorado State University, US This book explores whether foreign direct investment (FDI) can contribute to the competitiveness of industries in Central Europe and to narrowing the gap between these transition economies and countries within the European Union.

How Accession to the European Union Has Affected External Trade and Foreign Direct Investment in Central European Economies

During the Central European countries' reintegration into the world economy, their proximity and accession to the European Union greatly affected first the flow of capital and then the flow of goods. Countries that adopted radical liberal reform and had preferential access to EU markets have benefited most, attracting foreign direct investment and drawing multinational corporations relocating their production sites.

Foreign investment in eastern and southern Europe after 2008.

This book investigates the role that foreign direct investment (FDI) in central-eastern and southern Europe has played in the post-crisis period, comparing patterns across countries and sectors. An overarching objective of this publication is to assess the extent to which FDI can still be seen as a key driver of economic development, modernisation and convergence for Europe's low- and middle-income economies, taking into account also the risks and limiting factors associated with FDI.

European Trade and Foreign Direct Investment U-shaping Industrial Output in Central and Eastern Europe

Cross-Border Investing: The Case of Central and Eastern Europe offers a view that reflects two main hypotheses: -You cannot understand foreign direct investment (FDI) trends and developments unless you understand the company's motives to invest, -You cannot understand a company's cross-border investment decision-making unless you understand what the investment area offers. This is the reason why this text builds up a relationship between the world of companies' decision-makers and that of the policy makers in the public sector. It does so by linking the business processes to the factors that together constitute the location profile of a country or a region. Based on more than 15 years of practical experience as well as research in the field of FDI, Dr Julia Djarova offers a Cross-Border Investment Model to describe the logic behind the decision-making process concerning foreign investments made by companies. The model is illustrated by a number of case studies of multinationals.

This anthology examines Love's Labours Lost from a variety of perspectives and through a wide range of materials. Selections discuss the play in terms of historical context, dating, and sources; character analysis; comic elements and verbal conceits; evidence of authorship; performance analysis; and feminist interpretations. Alongside theater reviews, production photographs, and critical commentary, the volume also includes essays written by practicing theater artists who have worked on the play. An index by name, literary work, and concept rounds out this valuable resource.

Practical Guide to Foreign Direct Investment in the European Union

Foreign Direct Investment (FDI) from third countries—a desirable form of investment to boost the EU's economy or a threat to important EU and Member State interests that must be mitigated via FDI screening mechanisms? FDI screening is a complex, controversial and highly topical subject at the intersection of law, politics and economics. This book analyzes the political rationale behind FDI screening in the EU, reveals the legal limitations of current FDI screening mechanisms based on security and public order, and identifies legislative options for broader screening mechanisms in accordance with EU and international economic law. In particular, the book identifies the four main concerns in the EU regarding FDI from third countries: distortive competition effects; the lack of reciprocity on FDI treatment between the EU and the investor's home country; objectives of the investor or their home country that may be detrimental to EU interests; and safety of private information. On this basis, the book analyzes the Screening Regulation (Regulation (EU) 2019/452) and its newly introduced screening ground "security or public order" and asks whether this and other similar screening grounds based on the notions of security, public order and public policy can address these concerns with regard to foreign investors. Based on an analysis of WTO law and EU primary law, it argues that they cannot. Thus, the question arises: Do the EU and Member States have the flexibility to adopt broader FDI screening mechanisms? To answer this question, the book examines the freedoms of capital movement and establishment in EU primary law, as well as various sources of international economic law such as, first and foremost, the WTO's General Agreement on Trade in Services, but also other bi- and plurilateral trade and investment treaties, including the EU-China Comprehensive Agreement on Investment. In closing, the book identifies various legislative options for broader FDI screening mechanisms—and their shortcomings.

Screening Foreign Direct Investment in the EU

This book examines how foreign direct investment (FDI) inflows to Central and Eastern Europe have changed after the Great Recession. It argues that beyond their cyclical effects, the economic crisis and the changing competitiveness of Central and Eastern European countries have had structural impacts on FDI in the region. FDI has traditionally been viewed as the key driver of national development, but the apparent structural shift means that focusing on cheap labour as a competitive advantage is no longer a viable strategy for the countries in the region. The authors argue that these countries need to move beyond the narrative of upgrading (attracting FDI inflows with increasingly higher value added), and focus on ensuring greater value capture instead. A potential way for doing this is by developing the conditions in which innovative national companies can emerge, thrive and eventually develop into lead firms of global value chains. The book provides readers with a highly informative account of the reasons why this shift is necessary, as well as diverse perspectives and extensive discussions on the dynamics and structural impacts of FDI in post-crisis Central and Eastern Europe.

Foreign Direct Investment in Central and Eastern Europe

This title offers comprehensive coverage of FDI in all European countries. Each section is prefaced by an introduction by a senior minister. Country entries include data on the following: foreign investments; locations of current and future production facilities and co-ordinating headquarters in each country; business and investments incentives; and appraisals by financial institutions and major foreign investors on economy and investments. The book also contains comparative tables, data and graphs and some overall sections on business, retail and finance in Europe. A how best to utilize this book section provides information on: identification of target markets; finding joint venture partners and locations for financial services; and assessing the cost of market entry. It also contains two special sections: one on FDI prospects in the Russian Federation, and the second on Asian corporate experience in the new Europe.

Globalisation Through Trade and Foreign Direct Investment

This title was first published in 2003. Covering a diverse range of countries such as Bulgaria, the Czech Republic, Hungary, Poland, Slovakia, Slovenia and Russia, as well as referring to the characteristics of the region as a whole, this book examines the inflow and outflow of foreign direct investment from both home and host company and country perspectives. By analyzing foreign direct investment in terms of process, content and context, the book provides a holist approach towards direct foreign investment in the transitional context of Central and Eastern Europe, embracing both macro- and micro-economic perspectives of the process.

European Business Sourcebook

This book looks at the evidence and assesses the impact of competition among governments to attract FDI. It finds little evidence directly to support fears of a "global race to the bottom" in labour and environmental standards.

Foreign Direct Investment in Central and Eastern European Countries

The fall of communism and subsequent developments have put a renewed spotlight on the potential of the Balkan economies. Bulgaria, Albania, Serbia & Montenegro, Romania and the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia are countries which have attracted low levels of investment and poor political leadership in most of the countries has delayed much needed reforms. However, there are now signs of improvement and this timely book fills a significant gap in the available literature. Demonstrating that these countries must engage as fully as possible with the world economy via EU accession, this book explores the implications of the specific characteristics of these countries which have made the transition process more difficult. This exciting new volume is valuable reading for students, academics and business professionals interested in international development in the Balkans.

Foreign Direct Investment in Central and Eastern Europe

This open access book explores the most recent trends in the EU in terms of development, progress, and performance. Ten years after the 2008 economic crisis, and amidst a digital revolution that is intensifying the development race, the European Union, and especially Central and Eastern Europe, are ardently searching for their development priorities. Against this background, by relying on a cross-national perspective, the authors reflect upon the developmental challenges of the moment, such as sustainable development, reducing inequality, ensuring social cohesion, and driving the digital revolution. They particularly focus on the relation between the less-developed Eastern part of the EU and its more developed Western counterpart, and discuss the consequences of this development gap in detail. Lastly, the book presents a range of case studies from different areas of governance, such as economy and commerce, health services, education, migration and public opinion in order to investigate the trends most likely to impact the European Union's medium and long-term development.

Development Centre Studies Policy Competition for Foreign Direct Investment A study of Competition among Governments to Attract FDI

The enlargement of the European Union towards the East from May 2004 has generated an increase of about 100 million inhabitants in the EU population, and has especially brought along major challenges and important opportunities both for the "new" countries and for the "old" member states. That is the main focus of this volume, which is divided into three sections. The first analyses the effects of the enlargement on the functioning of Community institutions, on the relations with the other Eastern European countries, and finally on regional and global economic dynamics; the second section analyses in detail the role of the monetary politics of the European Central Bank and the activities of the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development; and the third deals with the importance of the entrepreneurial class in ensuring the success of the transition process of the Eastern European economies.

The Balkans: Foreign Direct Investment and EU Accession

How will foreign investment plans for the UK be affected by the single European market? This report answers this important question and highlights many other concerns.

Development in Turbulent Times

Examines multinational investment in Europe and assesses its implications for the industries/economies of the European Community; intended to be of use to those interested in multinational investment and the future of the European economies after the completion of the single European market.

The EU and the Economies of the Eastern European Enlargement

This paper brings out the special mechanism through which taxes influence bilateral FDI, when investment decisions are two-fold in the presence of fixed setup flows costs. For each pair of source-host countries, there is a set of factors determining whether aggregate FDI flows will occur at all, and a different set of factors determining the volume of FDI flows (provided they occur). We develop a two-country tax competition model which yield an asymmetric Nash-equilibrium with high corporate tax rate and high level of public good provision in the rich source country for FDI outflows and with low corporate tax rate and low level of public good provision in the poor host country for FDI outflows. This is akin to the asymmetry among the EU 15 and EU 10 in the enlarged European Union, as of 2004. We also demonstrate that the notion that the mere international tax differentials are a key factor behind the direction and magnitude of FDI flows, the traditional race to the bottom argument in tax competition are too simple.

The Impact of the Single European Market on Foreign Direct Investment in the United Kingdom

This publication provides analyses of standardised data for foreign direct investment (FDI) flows and income for the EU covering the period 1992-2000. It includes a CD-ROM containing a number of standardised tables for each reporting country. Findings include: the year 2000 saw an increase of 16 per cent on the previous year for FDI investment to countries outside the EU, representing four per cent of EU GDP. The United States of America remained the EU's main partner and strong FDI outward investment was recorded to Canada and South America. EU FDI inflows to the EU from the rest of the world grew by 59 per cent, with the United States and Switzerland continuing to be the main investors. FDI flows between EU member states more than doubled during the period from 1999 to 2000, comprising mainly of ten major deals in the telecommunications sector.

Multinational Investment in Modern Europe

A collection of papers on the determinants and consequences of foreign direct investment (FDI) in the real and financial sectors of industrial countries. The text sheds new light on the determinants of FDI, in particular the role of governmental incentives. Another main topic is the role of FDI in the east European accession countries. It provides insights into the question of whether EU enlargement will have consequences for capital flows into those countries. Since the start of European monetary union, the discussion on cross-border mergers in the European banking industry has intensified. The final part of the book contains contributions to this debate.

European Union Foreign Direct Investment Yearbook

This book examines the transformation of the state in Central and Eastern Europe since the end of communism and adoption of market oriented reform in the early 1990s, exploring the impact of globalization and economic liberalization on the region's states, societies and political economy. It compares the different policies and national strategies adopted by key Central and Eastern European states, including the Czech Republic, Poland, Hungary and Slovakia, showing how initial internally oriented strategies of market reform, privileging domestic sources of investment, had by the late 1990s given way to externally oriented strategies emphasising the promotion of competitiveness by attracting foreign investment. It explores the reasons behind this convergence, considering the influence of internal and external forces, and the roles of interests, institutions and ideas. It argues that internationalization of the state is forged in the processes through which domestic groups linked to transnational capital attain domestic influence necessary to shape state policy and strategy. These groups — the comprador service sector in particular — constitute and organize political, social and institutional support of the competition state in the region. Overall, this book not only provides a detailed account of the political economy of post-communist transformation in Central and Eastern Europe, but also the processes by which states adapt to the forces of globalization.

North-South Direct Investment in the European Communities

East Central Europe is of considerable interest in view of EU and NATO enlargement. Economic growth is very heavily dependent on foreign investment and prospects for the regions in each transition state, therefore depend very much on where foreign investors choose to locate their projects. This book brings together a wide range of prominent authors from the US and Europe, including the late Frank Carter, to provide a timely critical examination and analysis of patterns and reasons behind foreign investment and how this affects regional development.

Economic Integration and FDI

Foreign direct investment (FDI) plays a key role in the globalisation process and is an important element affecting international relations. This publication provides detailed data for the years 1998-2003 for the EU as a whole mainly, as well as for Member States, for FDI flows from and into the EU, the role of emerging markets and FDI by economic activity.

Vying for Foreign Direct Investment

The European Union (EU) has emerged as a key actor in the global investment regime since the 1980s. At the same time, international investment policy and agreements, which govern international investment liberalisation, treatment and protection through investor-to-state dispute settlement, have become increasingly contentious in the European public debate. This book provides an accessible introduction to international investment policy and seeks to explain how the EU became an actor in the global investment regime. It offers a detailed analysis of the EU's participation in all major trade and investment negotiations since the 1980s and EU-internal competence debates to identify the causes behind the EU's growing role in this policy domain. Building on principal-agent and historical institutionalist models of incremental institutional change, the book shows that Commission entrepreneurship was instrumental in the emergence of the EU as a key actor in the global investment regime. It refutes business-centred liberal intergovernmental explanations, which suggest that business lobbying made the Member States accept the EU's growing role and competence in this domain. The book lends support to supranational and challenges intergovernmental thinking on European Integration. This text will be of key interest to scholars, students and practitioners of European and regional integration, EU foreign relations, EU trade and international investment law, business lobbying, and more broadly of international political economy.

European Union Foreign Direct Investment Yearbook 2001

How is the behaviour and impact of western multinational enterprises affected when investing in transition economies? what are the particular costs and benefits of such investment for the host countries? This comprehensive book provides an up-to-date analysis of the scope and pattern of foreign direct investment flows into the transition economies of central and eastern Europe.
