Intake Interviewing Assessment begins in the first session Tasks of the first meeting: - Establish rapport and trust - Review informed consent and limits of confidentiality - Begin identifying collaborative goals - Gather information about history - Make initial DSM diagnosis Intake interviews usually take longer than regular sessions and are billed differently - 90 minutes vs. 60 minutes - 60 minutes vs. 45 minutes

Balance assessment with building the therapeutic alliance - collaborative rather than interrogation . Focus on content and process - what they say and - how they say it Structured vs. unstructured Useful to have client complete psychosocial history and questionnaires prior to session Interviewing varies by therapist, though conventionally consists of exploring... - Source of referral - Presenting problem - Medical history - Mental health history - Family history - Occupational/educational history Ask about the history of the presenting problem - When did it begin? - How often does it happen? (frequency) - How long does it last? (duration) - How severe does it get? (intensity) Consider asking for ROIS • Past experiences can inform treatment planning - What did you like and dislike? - What worked for you? . Would a comprehensive assessment be helpful?

The following should be assessed during the first session, by survey, interview, or both: - Suicidal ideation -Homicidal ideation - Substance use - Trauma - Abuse/neglect

By the end of the first session, we should discuss with the client: - A summary of the interview (what the client said) - Treatment goals - Any referrals - Our plan for the next few sessions (e.g.. assessment, or our treatment approach) - Their experience of the interview

Review of the first session: - Source of referral - Presenting problem - Medical history - Mental health history - Family history - Occupational/educational history - Legal history - General screening for risk, barriers, reporting - Close with summary, collaborative identification of goals, any referrals, plan for next sessions, client experience
