Here are some words from MOMS everywhere: It's beautiful, its frightening, it's a wild ride.

The days are QUICK and the years are short.

There is nothing in the world that you can do that will EVER compare to motherhood! 6

You are unconditionally loved, filled with purpose, and Challenged!

You would keep your arms around them for the rest of your life if you could.

Letters and Reflections to My Adopted Daughters

Twenty-one letters to his adopted nieces, Elizabeth Catlett and Eliza Cunningham, 8 Sept. 1779 - 30 Oct. 1783 by John Newton, evangelical minister of Christ, first for fourteen years in Olney and then for twenty-eight years Rector of St. Mary Woolnoth, London with a memoir of Eliza Cunningham who died at the age of fourteen.

Dear Linda

Ten years ago I became the adoptive father of a beautiful baby girl. The joy of nurturing my daughter to the brink of her teenage years has been the most fulfilling time of my life. She also has given me the noblest title of all. I am a father. Often during the past decade my thoughts have returned to the memory of a meeting with a young pregnant girl. A young girl whose ultimate, loving decision changed the course of my life. I wonder if her thoughts reach across the distance to reflect about her birth child and me. Is she emotionally troubled? Is she at ease with her decision? Does she need to be comforted by the knowledge that her birth child is being raised in a loving and stimulated environment? "Dear Linda," is an open letter to the birthmother of my child. But it is more. It is an open letter to all birthmothers from the perspective of an adoptive father. Not only does it express profound thanks for a mature and heart wrenching decision, it expresses love. "Dear Linda," details the events of the past eleven years. Many times emotional and oftentimes humorous, the reader is taken from the tribulations of a couple's infertility to the rigors of the adoption process. Later, the life of a special girl is chronicled. This revealing glimpse of my daughter's life will erase any lingering doubts that the birthmother may harbor about her decision. One learns that a selfless, loving act has positively impacted not only a child and a couple but also an extended family. The birthmother will learn that she touched the lives of several people in ways that she initially couldn't have imagined.

Foster the Family

There are great rewards that come along with being a foster parent, yet there are also great challenges that can leave you feeling depleted, alone, and discouraged. The many burdens of a foster parent's day--hurting children, struggling biological parents, and a broken system--are only compounded by the many burdens of a foster parent's heart--confusion, anxiety, heartache, anger, and fear. With the compassion and insight of a fellow foster parent, Jamie C. Finn helps you see your struggles through the lens of the gospel, bringing biblical truths to bear on your unique everyday realities. In these short, easy-to-read chapters, you'll find honest, personal stories and practical lessons that provide encouragement and direction from God's Word as you walk the journey of foster parenting.

Letters to My Birthmother

This book significantly deepens the contemporary discussion of the theology and practice of adopting children. Both interdisciplinary and international, the volume offers a unique and uniquely insightful vision of Christian adoption that unites practical and theoretical perspectives.

A Graceful Embrace: Theological Reflections on Adopting Children

Upstairs, Downstairs actress Pauline Collins (who won a Tony Award for Shirley Valentine) writes a loving memoir to the daughter she gave up for adoption more than 25 years ago. Capped by the exhilarating moment of their reunion years later, this wonderful book is filled with love, laughter, and heartache--but has a happy ending. Photographs.

Letter to Louise

This book explores adoption of Asian children by white Americans, looking at multiple ways in which adoptive, birth, and foster mothers experience gender oppression from their different positions of class, race, and nationality and bringing to light the interdependencies and inequalities of the motherhoods of these three groups.

An Adopted Daughter, Or, The White Slave

By Marie Berger ISBN: 978-1-84747-189-5 Published: 2007 Pages: 184 Key Themes: Description This emotional turbulent and poignant book tells the story of Marie Berger's discovery that she was adopted. Marie only discovered this fact when her mother passed away and she caught a glimpse of her birth certificate. The book describes Marie's childhood and chronicles how she felt in finding that she was adopted. This is an intensely moving and excellently written book. About the Author Marie Berger was born in May 1945 in Reading, Berkshire. She trained to become a teacher and is also a qualified masseuse. She is now an author by profession and lives with her husband and her children in Lincoln. She is fond of travelling, foreign languages, pastel drawing and of course her writing. Book Extract On the doormat is a letter. I pick it up. I don't recognise the handwriting. It's postmarked New York, United States of America. I only know of one person who lives there. And it couldn't possibly be from her. could it? Feverishly I tear open the envelope, unfold the notepaper. My mind's in a whirl. It's impossible to take in the words. They swim across my line of vision. long I've been standing here mesmerised. My mind's blank. The neat script is dancing before my eyes. This can't be happening. It must be a dream. I blink rapidly, shake my head, and try to focus on reality. But there's no way I can get a grip on myself standing like a zombie here in the hallway. I must get out. I put on my coat, wander bewildered into the first cafe I come to. I sit in a corner, order a coffee, sip the hot liquid. I can't stop shivering. I hold my breath, force myself to start at the beginning, concentrate on each word. I begin to read. Dear Marie Teresa, I really don't know how to begin. Aunt Maud and Aunt Margaret came to visit me a week ago. I hadn't seen them for twenty-five years and they waited a week before telling me about you. They were scared. They gave me your letters and the lovely photos of the children I had never told anyone but Lorne, my husband. Marie Teresa, it wasn't on your birthday I thought of you. My heart cried out for you every day. When I had you I had no one to turn to and then I had to work and it was so hard to find anyone to take care of you. mother and a father. I was never given their address and I knew years later that I should have taken you to Belfast to your granny but I thought the shock would kill them. When you were born you were the image of your grandpa.

Unequal Motherhoods and the Adoption of Asian Children

This book considers how adults attempt to socialise young children into the adults it aspires to produce, from a number of diverse perspectives. The evolution of storytelling and its impact upon child development is initially explored, followed by the consideration of how social class, ethnicity, culture, and colonialism impact upon the ways that societies 'school' children about what to expect from adulthood. Different perspectives of early years education and growing up within a British/British colonial perspective are discussed and analysed. There is a focus throughout upon the way that children are constructed by the society in question, particularly those who are considered to be of lower status in terms of being poor, orphaned, or from ethnic groups against which the dominant culture discriminates. Topics covered by the chapters include topics covered by this Special Issue: current and historical constructions of childhood; the development of linguistic and 'storying' skills in childhood; childhood play and recreation; childhood and 'folk' narratives; philosophies of childhood; childhood and industrialisation; childhood and post-industrialisation; childhood education; childhood health; and cultures of childcare.

And This Is My Adopted Daughter

Michael Ireland has a pen, a notebook, and five days to live! In that time, his desire to bring his daughter to Christ will tax the resources of all three.

Resources in Education

"Birthdays may be difficult for me." "I want you to take the initiative in opening conversations about my birth family." "When I act out my fears in obnoxious ways, please hang in there with me." "I am afraid you will abandon me." The voices of adopted children are poignant, questioning. And they tell a familiar story of loss, fear, and hope. This extraordinary book, written by a woman who was adopted herself, gives voice to children's unspoken concerns, and shows adoptive parents how to free their kids from feelings of fear, abandonment, and shame. With warmth and candor, Sherrie Eldridge reveals the twenty complex emotional issues you must understand to nurture the child you love--that he must grieve his loss now if he is to receive love fully in the future--that she needs honest information about her birth family no matter how painful the details may be--and that although he may choose to search for his birth family, he will always rely on you to be his parents. Filled with powerful insights from children, parents, and experts in the field, plus practical strategies and case histories that will ring true for every adoptive family, Twenty Things Adopted Kids Wish Their Adoptive Parents Knew is an invaluable guide to the complex emotions that take up residence within the heart of the adopted child--and within the adoptive home.

A British Childhood? Some Historical Reflections on Continuities and Discontinuities in the Culture of Anglophone Childhood

Guide to becoming a parent through adoption.

A Letter to My Daughter

They say little girls are made of sugar and spice and everything nice. That innocent baby in the cot will one day become a sister, a mother, a wife, a daughter-in-law. A girl's first—and sometimes final—teacher is her mother. From first steps to first kiss, marriage to motherhood, mothers are the coach and counsellor in every girl's life. In this collection curated by veteran editor and writer Theresa Tan, mothers write letters to their daughters who may one day become mothers themselves. At times hilarious, mostly brutally honest, these are no-holds-barred, one-sided conversations between moms and their girls: values to impart, mistakes to learn from, wisdom to pass on, confessions to make, gratitude to express. These letters will make you laugh, weep and hug your child. Includes notes on lipstick and taking care of your body; how to survive marriage (and divorce); stupid things never to do;

making hard decisions; living life with passion; raising children and caring for aging parents; carrying on family traditions; focusing on what truly matters in life. Contributors include: Adlena Oh-Wong, Amy Poon, Ng Choong San, Cynthia Chew, Dawn Lee, Dawn Sim, Janet Goh, Jennifer Heng, Jenny Wee, Kalthum Ahmad, Karen Tan, Landy Chua-Moosa, Loretta Urquhart, Paige Parker, Petrina Kow, Sangeeta Mulchand, Shaan Moledina-Lim, Chiong Xiao Ting, Lin Xiuzhen, Yen Chua and Zalina Gazali

Twenty Things Adopted Kids Wish Their Adoptive Parents Knew

Dear Reader: Every woman has stories to tell about her mother. The mother she has, the mother she wants, the mother she misses, the mother she didn't know. We carry our mothers with us. Sometimes we carry her in our hearts, in our heads-or on our backs. Sometimes we are connected to our mothers with the thick, strong cords of intertwined love and true acceptance; other times the bonds are stretched thin and taut, scratching against our consciousness, rubbing raw the sore spots in our souls. But we are always linked to our mothers: both to the dreams of the mothers we wish for and the realities of the mothers we have. Even if our mother has been gone for years-for decades-the relationship is still very much alive. Mom is still with us: offering advice, encouragement, criticism, appreciation, rejection, solace. What we daughters do with this ongoing commentary-whether we unknowingly incorporate it into our reality, or consciously and carefully review it, deciding what to keep and what to put away-is fundamental to how fully we lead our own lives. In Dear Mom: Women's Letters of Love, Loss, and Longing, you meet women who have stripped away pretenses, societal constraints, and basic fears to uncover and express their most private truths about their relationship with their mothers. You get to peer over the shoulders of the women, share in their laughter, and experience their struggles. You see how other women cast light on this most complicated, rewarding, and sometimes frustrating relationship. You witness women at different stages of their lives reflecting on the legacies their mothers (knowingly or unconsciously, but always powerfully) left them. You hear how other women experience the glories and the scars, the hurt and the healing that make up this most primal of connections. You also get to meet the women behind the letters, since each Dear Mom letter is followed by a profile of the contributor. You learn about the surprises, satisfactions, and challenges they faced in writing down their most private truths. The 25 Dear Mom contributors include women from a variety of backgrounds, careers, religions, and lifestyles. They include (present and former) teachers, business owners, homemakers, real estate agents, artists, secretaries, social workers, journalists, and government officials. Some are accomplished professionals, well-known in their fields and public figures in their communities. They are married, single, divorced, widowed. Many, though not all, are mothers themselves. Many contributors are baby boomers, in their 40s and 50s. Others are in their 60s, 70s, and 80s. (The oldest contributor is over 90; her conversation with her mother continues!)

The Hopeful Mom's Guide to Adoption

When her mother died in a fire, eight-year-old Jerri thought life couldn't get worse. She was wrong. Sent to live with people who didn't want her, Jerri was powerless to stop her once-happy childhood from becoming a nightmare of cruelty and neglect. Only a stubborn belief in her own worth and a fierce will to live allowed her to reach adulthood physically and emotionally intact. This is a book that will inspire not only those who have been orphans or foster children, but anyone who has known the pain of being unwanted. - Back cover.

Letter to My Daughter: Words of wisdom, advice and lessons on life from parents

This concise book shows a new family-friendly way to compile a Life Story Book that promotes a sense of permanency for the child, and encourages attachments within the adoptive family. Joy Rees' improved model works chronologically backwards rather than forwards, aiming to reinforce the child's sense of security within the adoptive family.

The Adopted Daughter

When a lovely lady and a very kind man long for the perfect family, they ask for help from two very special Family Fairies. As time goes by they start to wonder if they'll ever have a family of their own. Will the Family Fairies really be able to grant their wish? Join them on their journey to find out if all their dreams finally come true.

Dear Mom

Following the success of her first book, 'Malvina The Special Little Girl Who Stole Our Hearts' which tells the story of a couple's fight to find their daughter and to adopt her from a Russian Baby Home, Nina Harper's sequel 'Letters To Malvina' continues the narrative of Malvina's life with her forever family. Despite missing many of their daughter's first experiences during her time in the Baby Home, Nina and her husband Rob encountered the joy of sharing many other firsts with Malvina following her adoption into their family. Nina recorded these experiences by writing letters to her daughter along the way, to provide a memoir of what followed once the adoption was complete, and a legacy for her daughter to treasure as she grows. 'Letters to Malvina' captures the emotions of the adoptive parent and the challenges and wonder of the ongoing adoption journey. In a world where it is so easy to forget the joy that surrounds us, 'Letters To Malvina' reminds the reader of what is important in life, and shares the heart-warming story of the continuing journey of one little girl who was dreamt about, wished for and prayed for long before the dream became a reality. 'Letters To Malvina' is a celebration of the joy that international adoption can bring to a family.

The Life of Schleiermacher as Unfolded in His Autobiography and Letters

John Thelwall's The Daughter of Adoption: A Tale of Modern Times is a witty and wide-ranging work in which the picaresque and sentimental novel of the eighteenth century confronts the revolutionary ideas and forms of the Romantic period. Thelwall puts his two main characters, the conflicted English gentleman Henry Montfort and the Creole Seraphina Parkinson, through their paces in a slave rebellion in Haiti, where they barely escape with their lives, and in London society, where Henry almost loses his soul. Combining political analysis with melodrama and flat-out farce, Daughter expands the scope of the abolitionist novel, pushing the argument beyond the slave trade to challenge empire and racial superiority. Historical materials on Thelwall's life, the abolitionist movement, and eighteenth-century educational theories provide a detailed context for the novel.

Letters My Mother Never Read: An Abandoned Child's Journey (Townsend Library)

Jane Caldwell, daughter of Joseph Caldwell and Mary Bennett, was born in 1808 or 1809 in Mercer County, Pennsylvania or Steubenville, Ohio. She married John Waite in about 1830. They had seven children. She married Eli Brazee Kelsey. She died in 1891 in Bountiful, Utah.

Life Story Books for Adopted Children

This book moved me to my very core' Celeste Ng, author of Little Fires Everywhere Finalist for the National Book Critics Circle Award for Autobiography Named a Best Book of the Year by The Washington Post, NPR, Time, The Boston Globe, Real Simple, BuzzFeed, Jezebel and Bustle Growing up in a sheltered Oregon town, Nicole Chung was the only Korean she knew. Taunted in the playground, and constantly reminded that she was different, she dreamt of one day looking in the mirror and feeling as though she belonged. The story her mother told her about her birth parents was always the same: they had made the ultimate sacrifice in the hopes of giving her a better life. But years later, grown up and expecting a child of her own, Nicole begins to wonder if her mother's story is the whole truth. As she embarks on a search for the people who gave her up, she discovers that the deeper she digs, the darker and more surprising the truth. Heart-rending yet endlessly hopeful, All You Can Ever Know is a compelling memoir about adoption, race, and how it feels to lose your roots – and then find them in the least expected of places.

The Letters of Madame de Sévigné to Her Daughter and Friends

We are living in an age where technology has taken over to the point we can do everything with our phones talking on the phone, responding to a text, and even replying to an email. But sometimes, it would be amazing to sit down and have a face-to-face conversation with our children without the interruption of their phones or a beep notification. Many parents sometimes struggle with finding the right words to express things to their children, so they would find ways to leave letters around their deepest thoughts something the children will be able to find. And we hope it will not have faded lines just to read our stories, memories, and so much more. In this book, you will find stories from parents who share their deepest, heartfelt thoughts that are formed into letters for their children to hold onto while offering sentiments to other parents who might be experiencing the same with their children. This book gives hope to those who feel hopeless. It brings value and integrity in knowing that there is no perfect way of raising our children. Providing them with life lessons something they can always refer to is priceless. We hope you enjoy our letters to our daughters and sons and share it with your loved ones.

The Family Fairies

After decades of separation, 26-year-old adoptee Katie Hern writes to her birthmother, Ellen McGarry Carlson. Written over a course of one year, this book follows the women's progress - from elation to understanding to accepting - and efforts to create an honest relationship. After several months, mother and daughter finally meet face-to-face in an emotional and exhilarating reunion.

Letters to Malvina

Abandoned as a baby in a London street, the author was adopted by an unmarried woman when she was about four years old. Her parents were never traced. Foundling: An Adopted Child's Search For Her Identity, makes the connection between what happened to the author abandonment, her conflicts with her adoptive mother and other substitute parents and the development of her inner life. The driving force behind the book is the need to record, analyze and explain her need for the phantom parents, and to describe her relations with her friends, mentors and, in particular, with the woman who adopted her. The flow of the writer's daydreaming, memories and associations is expressed in the two distinct voices of prose and poetry, a technique inspired by Dante's La Vita Nuova. The book is written in three parts. Part I, '1st Movement: Allegro moderato', opens with a letter to the unknown father: Dear Father, I don't know you. I know nothing about you except in my imagination. Words may help me find you; they'll be an exchange for your absence. With the passing of time you become more and more elusive. Where can I send this? Usually a letter is addressed to someone we know. I am your daughter. Why, then, do you act like a stranger? Because you are one, you say? You are a stranger but let's not allow that to stand in the way of writing to you. If only I could see you, know what you look like, hear your voice, know what you sound like. And why can't I know where you've lived? Know whether or not you're English, and if you're not, what is your nationality? And I want to know your name. Why won't you tell me about all these things? Or are you non-existent, or, since I have no memory of you and you are without substance, are you one of the dead men? But then, even the dead have a family genealogy. On waking this morning my intention was to say to you, "We're in this together." There is consolation in the exchange of affection. I may not have known my family but I must have had one'... In addition to letters to the unknown parents, '1st Movement: Allegro moderato' includes, through newspaper clippings and official letters, an account of the process of adoption as it was in one individual case in England in the 1930s. In general, though, '1st Movement: Allegro moderato' is dream-like in mood, interweaving people, places and time through memory and meditation. Part II, '2nd Movement: Andante con moto', consists of letters to the father and mother in an imaginary dialogue describing the girl's responses to people and events. These include the background of the Second World War, life in an English boarding school, her increasing involvement with music and her eventual entry to the Royal College of Music in London, her move as a married woman with children to the United States and her struggle there with thyroid cancer. Here is part of one of the letters to the unknown mother: Dear Mother, Miss Braun's depressions meant trouble. Children's Encyclopedias are scattered over the floor of my bedroom on the third floor. All afternoon I've been enjoying the colored pictures in the books, especially the ones of dinosaurs to whom I feel connected by a vague give and take with the past. Some of the books lie open, a few in the ten-volume, dark-green set are still shut and I look forward to getting to them later. I am crouched on the floor with the books. The door opens. Miss Braun stands there, just over the threshold, arms raised, looking fierce. "How dare you. Clear this up at once. All you do is cause trouble!" In a thunderbolt and a flash she's burst into a huge rage. Unlike her to lose self-control. Usually when she's angry she's icy, cold as ice, or like iron, mouth set, open and shut, black and hard. I've never seen her turn into a red-hot fire before, screaming at me louder and lou

(Color) Thoughts, Theories, and Impressions of Jane Caldwell Waite Dunn Kelsey

This sequel to volume 1 contains all of Thérèse's letters from the end of September 1890 (during her novitiate) until her death in 1897, as well as many letters written to or about her. Here the mature Saint Thérèse shows the path of her growth as a religious and as a deep spiritual writer. The reader learns much about all of her correspondents, including her two "missionary brothers," and gains familiarity with the development of her thought and message. Fifty pages of complementary documents give us useful tools for studying the texts. This work has been translated from the critical edition by John Clarke, OCD. The ebook includes 4 pages of facsimiles of Thérèse's letters, plus a fully linked general and biblical index.

(Black and White) Thoughts, Theories, and Impressions of Jane Caldwell Waite Dunn Kelsey,

Japan is the only country in the world where women writers laid the foundations of classical literature. The Kagero Diary commands our attention as the first extant work of that rich and brilliant tradition. The author, known to posterity as Michitsuna's Mother, a member of the middle-ranking aristocracy of the Heian period (794–1185), wrote an account of 20 years of her life (from 954–74), and this autobiographical text now gives readers access to a woman's experience of a thousand years ago. The diary centers on the author's relationship with her husband, Fujiwara Kaneie, her kinsman from a more powerful and prestigious branch of the family than her own. Their marriage ended in divorce, and one of the author's intentions seems to have been to write an anti-romance, one that could be subtitled, "I married the prince but we did not live happily ever after." Yet, particularly in the first part of the diary, Michitsuna's Mother is drawn to record those events and moments when the marriage did live up to a romantic ideal fostered by the Japanese tradition of love poetry. At the same time, she also seems to seek the freedom to live and write outside the romance myth and without a husband. Since the author was by inclination and talent a poet and lived in a time when poetry was a part of everyday social intercourse, her account of her life is shaped by a lyrical consciousness. The poems she records are crystalline moments of awareness that vividly recall the past. This new translation of the Kagero Diary conveys the long, fluid sentences, the complex polyphony of voices, and the floating temporality of the original. It also pays careful attention to the poems of the text, rendering as much as possible their complex imagery and open-ended quality. The translation is accompanied by running notes on facing pages and an introduction that places the work within the context of contemporary discussions regarding feminist literature and the genre of autobiography and provides detailed historical information and a description of the stylistic qualities of the text.
