Proceedings of the Pathological Society of Philadelphia, Volume 9

This work has been selected by scholars as being culturally important, and is part of the knowledge base of civilization as we know it. This work was reproduced from the original artifact, and remains as true to the original work as possible. Therefore, you will see the original copyright references, library stamps (as most of these works have been housed in our most important libraries around the world), and other notations in the work. This work is in the public domain in the United States of America, and possibly other nations. Within the United States, you may freely copy and distribute this work, as no entity (individual or corporate) has a copyright on the body of the work. As a reproduction of a historical artifact, this work may contain missing or blurred pages, poor pictures, errant marks, etc. Scholars believe, and we concur, that this work is important enough to be preserved, reproduced, and made generally available to the public. We appreciate your support of the preservation process, and thank you for being an important part of keeping this knowledge alive and relevant.

Proceedings of the Pathological Society of Philadelphia, 1906, Vol. 9 (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Proceedings of the Pathological Society of Philadelphia, 1906, Vol. 9 It is as follows: Small pieces of tissue, not more than 2 mm. In thickness, are hardened in 10 per cent. Formalin for twenty-four hours; they are then placed in 95 per cent. Alcohol for the same period, and washed in water for a few hours. Specimens are then transferred to a freshly made solution of silver nitrate per cent.) for three successive days, changing the solution each day, and maintaining a blood temperature. Light must be excluded. This is best accomplished by placing the bottles in the incubator. From the silver solution they are transferred to a 2 per cent. Solution of pyrogalllic acid, to which is added 5 per cent. Of formalin. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books. Resolution adopted by the Pathological Society of Philadelphia at its stated meeting held November 8, 1900. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books. Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work. Forgotten Books uses state-of-the-art technology to digitally reconstruct the work, preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy. In rare cases, an imperfection in the original, such as a blemish or missing page, may be replicated in our edition. We do, however, repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully; any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works.
