And It's the Task of the Scientist To Discover in Just What Sense this Is True Newton's Confidence that Nature Must Be Very Simple Which I Quoted that Reflects the Same Intuition However Obscure It May Be that Intuition about What Errant Haeckel Called Nature's Drive for the Beautiful Has Been a Guiding Theme of Modern Science since It's Modern Origins and with the Galilean Revolution Perhaps Even Its Defining Characteristic It's Hard To Say Exactly What It Is but that It's a Guiding Intuition Is Not in Doubt Biologists However Have Tended To Think Rather Differently about the Objects of Their Inquiry Very Commonly They Adopt What Francois Jacobi Laureate His Image of Nature Is What He Called a Tinkerer

And that Experience Serves Only To Set Options within a Fixed System of Principles all Determined by the Initial State Much as in the Case of Other Biological Systems Well a Great Deal of the Research the Last 40 Years in these Areas Has Been Driven by a Kind of Tension between Descriptive and Explanatory Adequacy That Is the Tension between the Search for True Theories of Languages the Attained State on the One Hand and a True Theory of the Invariant Initial State of the Language Oregon on the Other the Invariant Initial State Is the Topic of What's Come To Be Called Universal Grammar It's Adapting a Traditional Notion to a Quite a New Context

Were Made To Reduce the Scale of the Problem by Seeking Valid General Principles That Can Be Abstracted from Particular Grammars and Attributed the Universal Grammar Meaning to the Initial State of the Language Faculty Leaving a Residue That Might Be More Manageable Actually some of those Proposals Were Kind of Proposals That Were Then Being Explored and Reviewed in the Lectures Here 35 Years Ago after that Time the by Then Already There Was some Progress after that Time the Considerable Progress but It Still Left the Tension Unresolved that as the General Picture Was Somehow Fundamentally Defective

Say Something about that and Then To Move on to the or Called the Questions of Intentionality That Is the Question of How Language Now Understood within the by Linguistic Framework Relates to the Rest of the World Professor Chomsky Has Agreed To Take a Couple of Questions That Were Submitted by the Audience since these Questions Were Submitted at the Beginning of the Lecture They May Not Have Been Part of What's Covered Today It Might Be a Sneak Preview of Tomorrow Do You Still Believe that the Human Language Faculty Evolved All at Once in a Sudden Evolutionary Leap Doesn't this Conflict with the General Finding that Evolution Is Gradual

At the Beginning of the Lecture They May Not Have Been Part of What's Covered Today It Might Be a Sneak Preview of Tomorrow Do You Still Believe that the Human Language Faculty Evolved All at Once in a Sudden Evolutionary Leap Doesn't this Conflict with the General Finding that Evolution Is Gradual this Idea Sometimes Called the Monster Mutation Was Invented As Far as I'm Aware by Elizabeth Bates and Has Been Repeated by Many Other People It's Been Attributed to Me for some Reason I'm the Slightest Idea Why I've Never Said a Word about It

I Take for Granted that the Human the Human Leg I Mean It's Kind Of like Asking whether the Visual System Is Distinct from Other Systems of the Body of Course It Isn't or Say the Immune System of Course It's Not Distinct from the Rest of the Body like You Can't Cut the Immune System Out and Leave the Rest of the Body I Mean It's Impossible every Subsystem of the Body That's Isolated for a Particular Inquiry Is Isolated because It Has a Kind of an Integrated Character and You Think You Can Learn Something about It It Doesn't Mean that It's in a Little Box That You Can Pull Out Right so the Immune Systems in every Cell but It's Still a System and Presumably the Same Is True of the Language Faculty
