Negative Thoughts and Not Just Trying To Wipe Them Out that's Not Possible but Trying To Replace Them with New More Balanced Thoughts and this Can Really Take Time and Energy but an Example of a Negative Thought Would Be I Have To Have Seventy Percent Time and Range To Meet Clinical Guidelines and Be Healthy so You Know some People Might Say Well that's True You Know that's Factual They Tell Us but You Can You Don't Have To Say It's Not True It's Not about Being Right or Wrong a More Balanced Thought Might Be Looking at Your Evidence and You'D Have To Explore What We Look at Is You Know How Do We Focus on the Things within Our Control So this Is Really the Essence of Resiliency Resiliency Is Not Fixing all of Our Problems It's How Do We Cope with Our Problems in a Healthy Way so that We Can Move Forward and Yeah as You Said Make the Most of What You'Re Living Now So Actually Just a Quick Starting Point Even if You'Re Not Seeking Therapy I Would Highly Recommend this Whole Idea of Focus on Efforts and Not Just Outcomes

You Know I Have Great Blood Sugar's but Why Can't I Be Happy and It Could Be that You'Re Thinking Negative Thoughts about Yourself or How It Could Be Better or You'Re Holding Yourself Back from Other Things You Enjoy in Life because They Affect Your Blood Sugar's in a Negative Way So Yeah There's this Interaction between Feelings of Depression and Diabetes but I Think It's Not Always You Know Good Blood Sugar Management or You Know Not So Positive Blood Sugar Management Depression Is So Much about Our Thoughts Now I Do Think that People Who Have like a High Level of Sustained Blood Sugar Blood Glucose You Know Doctors and Endocrinologist Would Be Able To Speak to this Better I'M Not that Kind of Medical Professional but of Course Anything That Affects that Adds to Our Fatigue or Loss of Energy Which High Blood Sugar's Can I Think Yeah Could Absolutely
