The Battle of the Somme was one of the bloodiest of the First World War.

Fighting began on 1 July 1916, shortly after mines were detonated, leaving this crater.

There were 58,000 British casualties on the first day alone.

The Allied troops attacked along a 14 mile front.

At the Thiepval Memorial, more than 72,000 soldiers without graves are remembered.

After four months of heavy fighting, the battle ended as winter closed in.
