Tell me about a time ...

I was dealing with an elderly patient in a previous healthcare role who was suffering with dementia. A member of their family was present providing them with support.

Q. How would you deal with a difficult patient? I would start off by making sure my actions or the way I was communicating was not contributing to the patient being difficult.

I would carry out a triage assessment of the patients who require the treatment to ascertain the urgency of their medical situation.

Q. A patient you are treating is struggling to understand what you are saying. How would you adapt your style of communication?

One, it's important to understand the physical and emotional, and social needs of the older adult.

Two, assess their cognitive capacity, to see if they can understand you.

Three, communicate slowly and simply with the older adults.

Four, explain complex concepts through drawings or diagrams.

Five, ask about their health and treatment.

Six, ask them what they understand.

Seven, be sure to ask about their pain level.

Eight, tell them when you'll be back before you leave.

Nine, the goal of healthcare communication is making sure that seniors feel heard.

Ten, remember that older adult's process information differently, but this doesn't
