Yeah and I Mean if We Look at Who's Actually at the Moment Hindering or Preventing an International Legally Ban Treaty It's Mainly the Us and Russia Who Obviously Also Dominating the International Order I Mean It's Disarmament Has So Much To Do with Feminists but It Has Also So Much To Do with an Anti Colonialism and if We Look at the Nuclear Ban Treaty for Example We Know that Why Not As Many as We Would Have Wished for African Countries for Example Have Signed or Ratified Is because France the Uk and the Us Have Threatened They Wouldn't Say the Word Threatened And What We Need To Do Is Continue To Push Forward It Will Take Time but Get these Grassroots Ideas into the Rooms Where the Final Decisions Are Made Thank You Yeah We'Re Trying To Do So Yeah I Want To End the the Our Discussion with a Question of Bringing the the Violence of the International Level to the Domestic Level and You'Ve Just Written a Piece Which Will Be Published I Think in Two Weeks of the Inter-Linkages of the Violence at the International Level and the Violence at the Domestic Level and You'Ve Already Touched upon It in the Beginning

The Way Things Are Titled because It Was a Conversation about Fundamental Rights and the Audience Was Far More Full There Are About Three Times as Many People Here and the Panel Was all Women except for the Moderator and It Was Specifically Targeting Law and Questions of Legislation and Court Decisions but the Representation in the Audience Was all Ages all Genders and So this Is Also an Interesting Thing but Patricia Sellars Spoke To Also as a Possible Solution Offering and I'M Offering this As Well as Part of the Methodologies but Also To Hear More that We

Need To Focus Also on some of the Wins She Is the Gender Advisor to the Prosecution Office for the International Criminal Court

So the First Question Is How Do We Challenge the Language Surrounding these Technologies How Do We Challenge the Way That We Talk about Them and Stop Glamorizing Them a Little Bit or Stop Talking about Them in Such an Aggressive Way and Start Talking about Them Actually Is Neutral Instruments That We Need To Dismantle There Are Lots of Different Theorists Out There That I Can Only Named One of the Top of My Head That Would Be Relevant to What You'Re Talking about Her Name's Mary Kaldor Lsc She She Was Amazing She Wrote this Paper on Something Called Security Cultures

But You Have To Look at the System and Dismantle It and Look at Where the Blockages Are in Terms of Talking about Violence or in Talking about Discrimination and You'LI See that It Happens at Lots of Different Levels So Again You'Re Talking about Shifting the Culture within Different Parts of a System at Different Levels of a System So another Methodology You Could Use Is Systems Theory So Have a Look at Systems Theory of Innovation Chris Freeman Is a Really Good Author on It at the National Level and Actor Network Theory Which Is a Bit Older but It's a Really Good Start Point and Social Constructivism Which I'M Sure You'Re Aware of

It Has More Money and Power than Most Countries in this World and It's GonNa Push Forward an Agenda on Demilitarization So Going Outside of Our Kind of Top-Down Political Systems and Doing a Much More Grassroots Movement and Finding Unlikely Allies in 2000 I Was a Part of the Jubilee 2000 Movement Which Was about Debt Relief It Was about Canceling Structural Adjustment through the World Bank and We Had a Really Interesting and Diverse Group It Was Religious Organizations It Was Unions and It Was Progressives and You Know We Were Really Starting To Make a Difference with the World Trade Organization Talks
