Suggestion: Use a reduced and basic colour scheme on your palette. Starting from Primaries: Magenta, Hansa and Cyan, (or Phtalo).

About the composition. When starting your Expressionist portrait aim to enlarge the overall size of the head, or any element featured it creates an effect of flatness. commonly used by Expressionist, Fauvist and Cubist Artists.

Once you have rendered the outline of your features, start to paint. Remembers to paint a brush stroke in one colour on your canvas, means painting the rest with the opposite - complimentary colour!

To achieve the flatness of the painting Expressionists mostly used pure colours, but tinted and shaded with white and black

Any pentimentos are much easier to correct with a darker shade!

To emphasize light areas or patches and areas of similar juxtaposed colours, outline that shape with strong dark or bright colours.

It is advisable to enrich and enhance or modify your palette with hues, such as Brown Umber, Alizarin red, Ultramarine blue, Viridian green, Indian yellow. This way you are creating your preferred palette and developing your personal aesthetic. :-

Filling the gaps. Like jigsaw puzzles, the most difficult part is to fit the last few pieces. Be careful not to exaggerate with the amount of colours: Colourful is good, garish is not.

About the background: This is another chance for you to reinforce the decorative, yet discerning part in your artwork and "bring it all together".
