Dragon's Teeth Along the Siegfried Line - Hollerath, Germany - Dragon's Teeth Along the Siegfried

Line - Hollerath, Germany by Euro Travelers 12,536 views 5 years ago 2 minutes, 48 seconds - Exploring WWII tank obstacles along the Siegfried Line - Hollerath, Germany - June 2018.

FRANCE The Siegfried Line ran 390 miles to protect Germany's western border
It consisted of a layered defense with bunkers, minefields and tank traps
The Germans called the dragon's teeth Hocker, meaning "humps or "pimples
They were designed to trap a tank and expose the weaker armor underneath
Engineers used demolitions to clear a path through the obstacles
Or they would simply use dirt to build a road over them
Long stretches of dragon's teeth
It is expensive to remove them so many people leave them or build around them
