Nurse Brenda is teaching a patient about a newly prescribed drug. What could cause a geriatric patient to have difficulty retaining knowledge about prescribed medications?

Answer: B. Sensory deficits could cause a geriatric patient to have difficulty retaining knowledge about prescribed medications. Decreased plasma drug levels do not alter the patient's knowledge about the drug. A lack of family support may affect compliance, not knowledge retention. Toilette syndrome is unrelated to knowledge retention

When examining a patient with abdominal pain the nurse in charge should assess

The nurse is assessing a postoperative adult patient. Which of the following should the nurse document as subjective data?

Answer: C. Subjective data come directly from the patient and usually are recorded as direct quotations that reflect the patient's opinions or feelings about a situation. Vital signs, laboratory test result, and ECG waveforms are examples of objective data.

Answer: A. Shock and dismay are early signs of denial-the first stage of grief. The other options are associated with depression-a later stage of grief.

The nurse in charge is transferring a patient from the bed to a chair. Which action does the nurse take during this patient transfer?

A female patient who speaks a little English has emergency gallbladder surgery, during discharge preparation, which nursing action would best help this patient understand wound care

Answer: D. Demonstrating by the nurse with a return demonstration by the patient ensures that the patient can perform wound care correctly. Patients may claim to understand discharge instruction when they do not. An interpreter of family member may communicate verbal or written instructions inaccurately.

Before administering the evening dose of a prescribed medication, the nurse on the evening shift finds an unlabeled, filled syringe in the patient's medication drawer. What should the nurse in charge do?

Answer: A. As a safety precaution, the nurse should discard an unlabeled syringe that contains medication. The other options are considered unsafe because they promote error.

When administering drug therapy to a male geriatric patient, the nurse must stay especially alert for adverse effects. Which factor makes geriatric patients to adverse drug effects?

Answer: B. Aging-related physiological changes account for the increased frequency of adverse drug reactions in geriatric patients. Renal and hepatic changes cause drugs to clear more slowly in these patients. With increasing age, neurons are lost and blood flow to the GI tract decreases.
