A Farm-management Survey of Three Representative Areas in Indiana, Illinois, and Iowa

This detailed study of farm management practices in three key Midwestern states offers valuable insights into the challenges and opportunities of agricultural life. Drawing on a range of data sources and his own firsthand observations, Edward Herrmann Thomson provides a nuanced picture of the economic, social, and environmental factors that shape the decisions of farm managers. With its practical focus and engaging prose style, this book is a must-read for anyone interested in the future of farming in the United States.
