The Monkey and The Crocodile : Panchatantra Stories

A monkey and a crocodile are good friends. However, the friendship gets spoiled. Who betrays whom?

Monkey and Crocodile

The series TALL TALES OF OLD INDIA is a modern English retelling of The Panchatantra (literally five books), a collection of millennia old Indian morality tales. Eighty five stories depict animals and humans struggling with thorny issues of friendship, collaboration, conflict and ambition. Relentless in their unwillingness to whitewash or romanticize adult life, they describe the ignoble as well as the noble, cruelty and deceit as well as honor, foolishness as much as cunning, deception as rampant as honesty. Monkey and Crocodile the fourth set of twelve stories, deals with how to protect and preserve any gains you have made in life, no matter in what sphere. Most of the loss-of-gain stories are told by the Monkey who fooled the Crocodile into freeing him from sure death by telling a clever story. Many are about the use of deceit to improve one's position, or to protect oneself. And the losers are foolish enough to be tricked out of their gains by a sweet-talking adversary. They are gullible and deserve what they get. Deceit, when exposed, can lead to the deceiver's undoing. One should be humble before the noble, use intrigue when one cannot win advantage by strength, pay bribes when necessary, pick a fight only with equals, and give good advice only to those best able to use it.

The Monkey and the Crocodile

A synopsis of the book, "Ook Ook Monkey" would be in summary, a detailed account of a juvenile fiction story of the bad karma of a promise; on behalf, of the ape who tries diligently to get a bunch of bananas from the tree, but he cannot because of mental physical limitations so he then relies upon the animals, as they pass him by, to reach out for their help to retrieve the bunch of bananas hanging from the tree. Each animal that tries to help the ape to get the bunch of bananas from the tree are given the promise that if they could get the bundle of bananas down from the tree for him that he would forever be in their debt and what ever they asked for from him that he would give to him. This book has a bazaar ending, of a twist, where it teaches the lesson of be careful of the promises that you make, because in the end you may not always get exactly what you made the promise for. The motivation for composing, this work was direct involvement and curiosity that my grandson had in the story, as I told the story as a bedtime story to him. This book can be classified as fiction with the market appeal envisions for children story readers.
