The Wizard of Hawarden

This story was written in loving memory of my late husband, John Willam Ewert. He is affectionately referred to as the "Wizard" in these adventures. This is a humorous story about our marriage, and moving to the village of Hawarden. The second part of the story takes place in an enchanted park located in the village of Annaheim This is a Saskatchewan fairytale.

The Wizard of Hawarden and Adaya Save Christmas

An exciting new Christmas adventure with the Wizard of Hawarden. Adaya, Leif, William Rabbit, Santa Claus, Pablo the Penguin and of course some nasty old witches that try to wreck Christmas for children all over the world by casting a cobweb spell that traps Santa and his reindeer.

The Wizard and the Beanstalk

The Wizard of Hawarden goes on a new adventure when he decides to invest in Bean Futures. He trades a goat and cheese at the farmers market for magic beans. When the wizard arrives home he plants the seeds in the garden and waits for bean tree to grow. The Wizard waters and fertilizes the tree; however, it fails to produce beans! He names the tree, Guinevere and casts a love potion. The beanstalk falls in love with the wizard and despite her best attempts to get the wizard's attention; he does not return her love. Guinevere grows into a lovely beanstalk and sends out her tendrils to destroy the Wizard and Susan's castle! Thankfully, Gordo, the fairy godfather comes to their rescue!

The Wizard's Spooky Halloween

The wizard of Hawarden has a very spooky Halloween when Alvin's monsters escape from the Haunted Hawarden High School. He meets up with a Werewolf, Nicola Tesla, and other creatures that are on the loose in this ghost town.

Eaton's Once Upon a Christmas

The Christmas season arrived as usual at the T. Eaton's Company in Saskatoon. During this time of the year, the wizard's spirit began to fill with goodwill towards his fellow man. Each year he looked forward to decorating the display windows. He created magical scenes since he loved to make children smile. Children and adults alike would eagerly press their noses against the panes of the frosted glass windows to see inside of the store. The wizard moved the wooden storage crates into the display windows. His blue eyes twinkled when he saw the plaster of Paris mechanical figurines. He tinkered with the archaic electrical cords, small rides, and assembled the Winterkins Ferris wheel. When he turned on the switch, it came to life, with bright twinkling lights, casting a hazy glow over the snow. The Winterkins began to whirl and twirl in their rides over the Winter Wonderland. He imagined the Winterkins yelling with delight when the Ferris wheel began to turn. He added the final touches to the display, by blowing glittery snowflakes over the wintery scene. Then he placed each of the little ones on skates so they could enjoy a day of winter fun, gliding across the silver, make-believe pond. John and Susan Ewert worked at Eaton's Department during the 1980s. Christmas was a magical time for both of them. After, John passed away in 2007. Susan decided to write fairy tales about their life together. She captures the magic of working at Eaton's during Christmas time in this short illustrated tale. Also, the book contains eighteen photos of the display and the story about "Once Upon a Christmas". The display can be seen during Christmastime at the Western Development Museum in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan.

The Wizard's Ghost Tales

The Wizard of Hawarden has two spooky Halloween adventures in Hawarden and Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan. The first ghostly tale unfolds when the Wizard and his wife, Susan, move to the village of Hawarden, Saskatchewan. The Wizard goes on a haunted ghost walk through the village of Hawarden. Halloween ghosts come to life when the Wizard visits the historic buildings on Main Street! Who will save the Wizard from these ghostly encounters? The second Spooky adventure begins when the Wizard visits Hopkins Dining Parlour in Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan, on Halloween night! A conversation drifts through the kitchen doors. The Wizard and the patrons listen to a heated discussion taking place in the restaurant's kitchen. The Chef's voice echoes throughout the restaurant. "Minnie, the soup of the night is Clam Chowder and not Navy Bean Soup!" The utensils start to clatter, and the pots are banging on the kitchen wall! "Okay, Minnie, stop messing with the dishes in my kitchen!" "I will make you Navy Bean Soup!" The Wizard and the patrons continue to listen to the one-sided conversation. Suddenly, the Chef screams when he's poked in the ribs by an invisible patron! Enjoy two Saskatchewan Halloween ghostly tales written by Susan Hathiramani.

The Wizard's Haunted Halloween at Hopkins Dining Parlour

The Wizard of Hawarden has a haunted Halloween adventure at Hopkins Dining Parlour in Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan. A conversation starts to drift through the kitchen doors. The Wizard of London

Mouseland is a political satire. The Wizard of Hawarden, and Gordo, the fairy godfather decide to get rid of the mouse infestation in the Wizard's home by casting a spell. They choose to turn Zucchini plants into a cat so it will chase away the mice. However, the spell fails when they find out the new cat is a strict vegetarian. Next, they decide to turn the mice into politicians since they believe the province of Saskatchewan needs a new government. This short story is written in memory of my late husband, John Ewert, and his best friend, Gordon Pederson. The story is inspired by Tommy Douglas, his speech to voters-Mouseland.

The Wizard

From the author of "The Secular Wizard" comes the further adventures of a modern-day man transported to a magical medieval world. When Matt Mantrell--Her Majesty's Wizard--conjures himself from magical Merovence to his hometown in New Jersey, he rescues his parents from a den of drug dealers by bringing them back to Merovence with him. But he and his family find themselves thrust into a battle with invading Moors. Together they set out to combat a cunning and deadly wizard.
