England in 1835 was a nation undergoing immense transformation, deeply impacted by the ongoing Industrial Revolution. ENGLAND IN 1835 BEING A SERIES

Excerpt from England in 1835, Vol. 2 of 3: Being a Series of Letters Written to Friends in Germany During a Residence in London and Excursions Into the Provinces Mr. T G introduced me to his father, who invited me to dinner for next Thursday, and offered his services in any way in which they might be useful to me. When I mentioned Waagen to him, who was perhaps to accompany me to Oxford, he instantly extended his invitation and his offers of service to him also. Such traits of manners as this arc certainly not piquant dishes a la -; but, at least, they are quite as characteristic as those which he has such malicious pleasure in relating. There was a countless train of equipages yesterday in Hyde Park - the same in Regent's Park, and God knows where else; and yet, on an average, no one keeps a carriage who has not 3000l. a-year to spend. In comparison with the affluence which manifests itself here, the whole continent seems poverty-stricken. These debates are quite recent, and references are given by the author to Hansard's reports of them 5, so that those who desire it can easily refresh their memory. England in 1835 : Being a Series of Letters Written to Friends in Germany, During a Residence in London and Excursions Into the Provinces

Excerpt from England in 1835, Vol. 3 of 3: Being a Series of Letters Written to Friends in Germany, During a Residence in London and Excursions Into the Provinces In the year 1680 the first ships sailed for China; and in 1698 the Company obtained, for an annual tribute, the first piece of ground, on which Calcutta was afterwards built. But about the same time, a great dispute arose between the Company and the government, respecting loans and payments to the latter, and it was also injured by the competition of rivals, who formed a second trading company. Its shares fell to thirty-seven per cent. In 1708 the two companies were induced, chiefly through the influence of Lord Godolphin, to consolidate themselves into one. The history of its disputes, wars, conquests, commercial enterprises, revenue, expenditure, and debts, fills a multitude of volumes, and even an abridgment of it cannot be given in a letter. It is, however, worth mentioning, for the explanation of the most recent events, that so long ago as in 1783, an opinion was entertained that the Company, which exercised a sovereign power over vast territories and various nations, required a different constitution. A bill, brought in by Mr. Fox, which paid little regard to the rights hitherto enjoyed by the Company, and would have transferred almost the whole power to the king's ministers, was rejected by the House of Lords but a different bill, introduced by Mr. Pitt, passed both houses in August, 1784.
