People-watching: Urban public spaces are often popular spots for people to simply observe others going about their day. This can include sitting on a bench and watching passersby. or watching street performers and other entertainers.

Socializing: Public spaces can be important gathering places for friends and family to socialize and spend time together. This can include picnics, barbecues, and other social events.

Cultural activities: Public spaces can be venues for cultural events such as concerts, festivals, and performances.

Rest and relaxation: Public spaces can be places for people to take a break from the hustle and bustle of urban life, and simply relax and enjoy the surroundings.

Work and study: Public spaces can also be used as work or study areas, such as outdoor coworking spaces or quiet areas for reading or studying.
