Languor and Ecstasy - Poetry of Paul Verlaine (1844-96)

Paul Verlaine was an important figure of the Symbolist and Decadent movements of 19th Century French poetry and art.

Born in Paris, Verlaine entered the Civil Service, becoming head of the press bureau but going into hiding after outbreaks of political violence.

Although married with a family, Verlaine embarked on a stormy affair with the poet Arthur Rimbaud dominated by their heavy use of absinthe, hashish and opium

They led a dissolute lifestyle in Paris, London, and later Brussels where he was eventually imprisoned after shooting and wounding Rimbaud in a drunken, jealous rage.

After leaving prison, he returned to England, where he worked as a teacher in Lincolnshire. Verlaine fell in love with a pupil, and after her death descended into a life of drug addiction and poverty.

Asthmatic crow Famished wolves What's happening to you In these sharp winds?

His work inspired many other artists, including composers Debussy and Faure, each of whom used Verlaine's poetry as the basis for compositions.

In 1894, Verlaine was elected France's "Prince of Poets."

In 1896, his years of excessive alcohol and drug abuse having taken their toll, Paul Verlaine died in Paris on 8th January

Les sanglots longs Des violons De l'automne

Blessent mon cœur D'une langueur Monotone.
Tout suffocant Et blême, quand Sonne l'heure
Je me souviens Des jours anciens Et je pleure
Et je m'en vais Au vent mauvais Qui m'emporte
Deçà, delà, Pareil à la Feuille morte.
