Not illustrated. 1882 edition. Excerpt: ...surreptitiously obtained, and that the coins were light and not of the intrinsic value promised; and finally, that the coinage of money was a royal prerogative that ought not to be entrusted to a subject. These complaints were investigated by the lords of the Privy Council, who found that the coins were of good value, the copper being of the best quality, the pieces heavier, than the patent required, and that the attorneygeneral, the solicitor-general and Sir Isaac Newton, the master of the Mint, had been consulted as to the patent and had assisted in drawing it up, and lastly, that Ireland had never had so good a coinage; to which we add, after comparing the English coins of the same year, many of which, as well as those of Wood, are now before us, dredged up from our Floating harbour, that the Bristol money is both heavier and of better quality, as well as of far superior workmanship and finish, in fact they were not equalled until, in 1797 and 1799, the coinage was again entrusted to private hands (at the celebrated Soho mint). In 1726 Macklin performed at the Theatre, Jacob's wells. Queen square, which was begun in 1708, was completed this year. The wharf continued on the Back, south of Queen square, for 180 feet forward.
