#Man is wolf to man #Homo homini lupus #Sigmund Freud #Human nature #Aggression in humans

Sigmund Freud's interpretation of the Latin phrase 'Homo homini lupus' ('Man is wolf to man') highlights the inherent aggression and selfishness within human nature. This concept suggests that humans are capable of preying on each other and that civilization is necessary to control these destructive impulses, offering a pessimistic view of interpersonal relationships and the constant struggle between individual desires and societal constraints.
