The Power of Goodness: Art and Stories for a Culture of Peace and Justice

Thirty stories of nonviolence and reconciliation show how respect for the dignity of self, others, and nature emboldens people to act peacefully and justly. These stories capture the excitement of action, the encouragement of small acts that make big differences, and the joy of seeing from new perspectives. This book accompanies the art exhibitions created by young people ages 6-19 from Ukraine, Chechnya, and around the world. New stories from Ukraine, Israel, and Palestine have been added to stories from Chechnya, France, Germany, Kenya, Russia, the United Kingdom, and the USA. The artwork and stories depict the power of loving kindness in the lives of both young and old. Friendship, forgiveness, and community emerge in situations where paths of fairness and integrity are not readily apparent.

The Power of Goodness: Stories of Nonviolence and Reconciliation Selected for the Children of Chechnya

Short stories of nonviolence and reconciliation from the lives of real people capture the excitement of action, the joy of seeing from new perspectives, and the encouragement of witnessing small acts that make big differences. Artwork by children ages 6-20 from Chechnya, Russia, and around the world illustrate each story. They call us to pay attention to "those tiny, invisible, molecular moral forces that work from individual to individual through the crannies of the world." "This collection of stories for children speak of loving-kindness and sympathy. Such kindness is needed wherever cruelty predominates, so that it can surpass cruelty a hundred times over, and help consign it to oblivion." Musa Akhmadov, Chechen writer "In these dangerous times we can all be encouraged to be active, by reading this book. Hooray for all the people, young and old, in widely separated parts of the world, who have cooperated to put it together." Pete Seeger, folk singer

On the Power, Wisdom, and Goodness of God

When confronted by horrendous evil, even the most pious believer may question not only life's worth but also God's power and goodness. A distinguished philosopher and a practicing minister, Marilyn McCord Adams has written a highly original work on a fundamental dilemma of Christian thought—how to reconcile faith in God with the evils that afflict human beings. Adams argues that much of the discussion in analytic philosophy of religion over the last forty years has offered too narrow an understanding of the problem. The ground rules accepted for the discussion have usually led philosophers to avert their gaze from the worst—horrendous—evils and their devastating impact on human lives. They have agreed to debate the issue on the basis of religion-neutral values, and have focused on morals, an approach that—Adams claims—is inadequate for formulating and solving the problem of horrendous evils. She emphasizes instead the fruitfulness of other evaluative categories such as purity and defilement, honor and shame, and aesthetics. If redirected, philosophical reflection on evil can, Adams's book demonstrates, provide a valuable approach not only to theories of God and evil but also to pastoral care.

ON THE POWER WISDOM & GOODNESS

This book looks at virtue as "the power to do good" from the theological, philosophical, and poetic perspective. None of us should be seeking virtuous perfection in orienting ourselves to the good in this life; we should only be seeking change. The journey is the goal.

The Bridgewater Treatises on the Power, Wisdom and Goodness of God as Manifested in the Creation

"This chapter reflects on the power, wisdom, and goodness of God as manifested in the adaptation of external nature to the moral and intellectual constitution of man. The author addresses a number of topics including the economic well-being of society, the role of virtue in defining the character of man, the connection between the intellect and the emotions, and the defects and uses of natural theology." On the Power, Wisdom and Goodness of God

"In this enumeration and history of the principal tribes of the Animal Kingdom, we have traced in every page the footsteps of infinite Wisdom, Power, and Goodness. In our ascent from the most minute and least animated parts of that Kingdom to man himself, we have seen in every department that nothing was left to chance, or the rule of circumstances, but every thing was adapted by its structure and organization for the situation in which it was to be placed, and the functions it was to discharge; that though every being, or group of beings, had separate interests, and wants, all were made to subserve to a common purpose, and to promote a common object; and that though there was a general and unceasing conflict between the members of this sphere of beings, introducing apparently death and destruction into every part of it, yet that by this great mass of seeming evil pervading the whole circuit of the animal creation, the renewed health and vigour of the entire system were maintained. A part suffers for the benefit and salvation of the whole; so that the doctrine of the sufferings of one creature, by the will of God, being necessary to promote the welfare of another, is irrefragably established by every thing we see in nature; and further, that there is an unseen hand directing all to accomplish this great object, and taking care that the destruction shall in no case exceed the necessity"--Book. (PsycINFO Database Record (c) 2009 APA, all rights reserved).

Get Goodness

In a lotus-filled lake lives a king of fishes, devoted to the happiness and well-being of all the fish in his realm. But one year the lake and all its inhabitants are endangered by a drought. Desperate, the Fish king appeals to the gods and the forces of nature to send a healthy rain. Through the power of his goodness, the lake is restored and all its creatures are saved.

On the Power Wisdom and Goodness of God as Manifested in the Adaptation of External Nature to the Moral and Intellectual Constitution of Man by Thomas Chalmers

Activate Your Goodness is a practical guide for doing good for yourself and others, offering you inspiration for immediate improvement of your own life and the lives of those around you. Author Shari Arison, visionary businesswoman and philanthropist, is candid about her own personal stories and also provides examples from others who have made a difference by thinking, speaking, and doing good. Shari boldly shares her own experiences of living an extraordinary life – as one of the world's most powerful women and the owner of a business empire that spans the globe – and how she has integrated the power of doing good in all aspects of her life and career. The unexpected and delightful insight that emerges from the book shows that when you find a way to do good for others, you also do good for yourself. This is a book to share with your loved ones and those who are partners in your desire to create a better world for future generations. You may even discover your own connections to make your life joyful beyond measure!
