The Tale of Bobby Bobolink Tuck-me-In Tales by Arthur Scott Bailey Perched upon a swaying last year's cattail, Mr. Red-winged Blackbird shook his head in reply. And he said that no doubt it would be a week before the looked-for arrival. "The season's a bit backward," Mr. Red-winged Blackbird remarked. The Tale of Mrs. Ladybug

Around the world each night, parents tell stories to children as they put them to bed. Margaret Read MacDonald -- a folklorist, storyteller, and children's librarian -- uses bedtime tales in the daytime to end her story hours on a calm note. Here she includes five of her favorites from around the world. Chin Chin Kobokama tells the story of a young Japanese girl who overcomes her fear of the dark -- and learns there are good reasons to clean up her room. Snow Bunting's Lullaby, a lovely Siberian tale, shows the lengths to which Papa and Mama Bunting must go to protect their children -- and get them to sleep. A South American tale explains the movement of the sun and moon. And Kanji-Jo, the Nestlings, a lively Liberian tale, shows, as so many folk stories do, that there's no place like home. In elegant, finely detailed watercolors, artist Yvonne Davis joins MacDonald in guiding the reader on a bedtime trip around the world.

Arthur Scott Bailey (1877 – 1949) was the author of more than forty children's books. "Mr. Bailey centered all his plots in the animal, bird and insect worlds, weaving natural history into the stories in a way that won educator's approval without arousing the suspicions of his young readers. He made it a habit to never 'write down' to children and frequently used words beyond the average juvenile vocabulary, believing that youngsters respond to the stimulus of the unfamiliar.

Tuck-me-in Tales

There was a great excitement in the neighborhood of Farmer Green's house. Rusty Wren had found some strange tracks. He saw someone whose legs are long and thin; and his body is very small and called him Daddy Longlegs. No one knows Daddy Longlegs real name and where he lives then all the neighbors began to call him Daddy Longlegs. Amazing how our physical appearance reflect on our nicknames.

This is a very awesome book to read especially to those who loves to sing. Bobby Bobolink would sing with such zest while he was frisking about in the air that it was a marvel to many how he could do two things like that, at the same time, and yet put so much life into each. A song can actually change the lives of people, sometimes a song can save lives.
