intro to swarm prevention & control swarming is bees natural means of increasing in numbers external signs that bees are likely to swarm bees returning exhausted from the field indications of overcrowding inspecting inside a strong colony in spring inspecting the brood box observing a dummy queen cell (also known as a play cup) look for warm cells that may appear on any frame in the brood box bees build 3 types of queen cells A. supercedure (usually 3 on the face of the comb B. emergency (up to 30 on the face of the comb C. swarm (at least 12 on the bottom edge of the brood comb) observing pollen,sealed & unsealed brood, dummy cell emerging of a newly born worker bee presence of drones in August (just before Spring time) good example of a colony that may swarm with a lot of capped brood & a young queen note the queen is marked with a white dot by the beekeeper for easy identification marking the queen with a white Posca" pen" reasons to prevent your hives from swarming steps to prevent hives from swarming expanding the size of the cavity making more room in the brood box alternating sealed brood frames with empty frames placing empty frames in the brood box will give the queen more room to lay eggs & workers more work to do re-assembling the hive replacing frames of honey in the super with brood frames check brood in super for queen cells 5 days after moving above the excluder when adding bees to a weak hive, shake new nurse bees in front of hive to avoid fighting if possible avoid excess smoke to keep nurse bees on the brood frames to be removed move nurse bees into a weak hive to avoid fighting. The nurse bees will mature to become field bees reasons for shaking new nurse bees in front of a weak hive the demaree method when rotating the hive 180 degrees, secure the hive firmly with a strap or Emlock placing a new queen bee in your queenless box uniting 2 colonies with newspaper to slowly unite colonies bees using scent glands to guide field bees returning explaining the result of the 180 degree box turn this hive is fitted with a beetle jail to trap small hive beetles & is not related to the demaree method remove tracheal mites shaking the bees down into the chamber just in case using my hand as a brush move over all of the other existing frames lay your equipment right next to the hive set up the new hive and unbox drop the brood frames dropping one of the frames from the other hive take off the top little wooden panel pry out the feed proceed to shake the bees laid it by the front of the hive fill up the hive

set up their feeding pulling the two top brood frames
