Q. Tell me about yourself and why you want to be a Ward Clerk?

Q. What are the personal characteristics and skills needed to be an effective Ward Clerk?

To be effective as a Ward Clerk, you need exceptional organisation and planning skills. If you don't, you will make mistakes, and this will impact on the service that is provided to patients.

Q. An angry and irate patient calls you and they want to make a complaint. How would you deal with this situation?

I would start off by listening to their complaint and I would give them time to vent off. Whilst I would not tolerate unacceptable language or behaviour, I believe it is important to give people the chance to speak as this helps defuse the situation.

Q. Give an example of a time you worked well and how you prioritised?

TIP - As an NHS Ward Clerk, you will need to show exceptional organization and planning capabilities. Give a specific situation you have previously been in where you demonstrated your ability to complete lots of tasks on time and to a high standard.

in my last job, my manager asked me to cover for another administrative worker who had to take a short period of leave due to family problems

Q. What have you done to prepare for this role? I started off by reading the job description and the person specification to make sure I have the necessary transferrable skills and experience to carry out my duties to a high standard.

With this approach, they drive each other. Covering the what, why, and how of running a client-centered practice, with examples from law firms leading this revolution as well as practical strategies for implementation, The Client-Centered Law Firm is a rallying call to unlock the enormous latent demand in the legal market by providing client-centered experiences, improving internal processes, and raising the bottom line.
