In the end, the ...

Beginning

Richard's childhood: graphic art shop class, starting a first printing business at the age of 13 with a platen press

Making a photo of Lyndon B. Johnson with handmade "Working press" shield

How a printing press helped to attract 300 students to a Junior Astronomy Club's lecture

Promoting events and printing art through the years

Twists of life: Path from printing to bookbinding through astrophysics, car crash, economics, violin, and chorus

Richard's firsts: full leather and tooled bindings made as a student of Daniel G. Knowlton in 1969

"The Georgics" of Virgil with the French method of onlay: Learning on your own mistakes to make your bookbinding and design better

"Garbage or archive": The importance of documenting the process and the results of errors

The shift from making "just" books to making book art that is a social commentary

Origins of the Center for Book Arts in New York City

Disconnect between the communities: design, art, and bookbinding. Possibility of collaborations

Theoretical critical apparatus for discussion of bookbinding and book art. The "Material meets metaphor" methodology introduced by Richard Minsky

Should an artist be versed in all the theories or can it be an intuitive art? Differences between art and craft

Importance of being able to talk about your art
