Thanksgiving for Victory. A sermon [on 1 Cor. xv. 57], etc

Excerpt from The Meaning of Victory and Peace: A Sermon Preached at the Thanksgiving Service of the First Church of Christ and the Second Church of Christ in Hartford, Thanksgiving Day, November 28, 1918 Text: Psalm CXX VI: 3 The Lord hath done great things for us, Whereof we are glad. We thank God that our Thanksgiving is not one of pride. The victory that has been won was not won by us alone. Here is nothing for frantic boast or for foolish word. Chateau Thierry and St. Mihiel are great names now in the history of the world, thank God. They are radiant names in the history of America. But there are other great names in the history of the world, the Marne and Verdun and Vimy Ridge, names that will shine as long as the world's history is remembered and read, and these names are not written on the pages of American history. I am not one of those who would lament because this is so. I am one of those who would remember that it is so, lest I be foolish and boastful in a day when it behooves me to be humble in my thanks giving. Excerpt from Thanksgiving Sermon for the Victory of Great Britain at the Battle of the Nile: Preached in the Cathedral at Quebec, January 10th, 1799 Proposition - Far from us, Christians, that profane and earthly joy which will perhaps fill, on this day, the thoughts of the children of this world. Let us find our joy in the Lord. Let us thank Him for the great benefits that will ow fromthe glorious success which we have met this day to commemorate; let us not consider with indifference an event with which our interests of every kind are so closely con nected. Excerpt from Peace Through Victory: A Thanksgiving Sermon, Preached in Broadway Tabernacle Church, New York, on Sabbath, September 11, 1864 When a nation is challenged by the assaults of evil men to draw the sword in defence of justice, it may rightfully appeal to God to grant it victory upon the field, and may appropri ately refer its victories to His favoring Providence. Victory and plenty great subjects of thanksgiving. A sermon preached ... On Thursday the 29th of November, 1759. Being appointed by His Majesty for a public thanksgiving, etc

Excerpt from The Patriot's Song of Victory: A Thanksgiving Discourse, for Recent Military Successes, Delivered in the Third Congregational Church, New Haven, September 11, and Repeated, by Request, in the Same Place, September 18, 1864 The humblest, as well as the most exalted agency, however, is forever to stand revealed in the glory of this illustrious victory. The harp of the prophetess awakes its sweetest strains, its deepest pathos, and pours forth its richest tide of love and gratitude, in memory of that heroic woman who, with nail and hammer, finished the detestable career of the sleeping tyrant' Sisera. Blessed above women shall Jael, the wife of Heber the Kenite be, -blessed shall she be above women in the tent. With what intense satis faction does this sweet singer in Israel rehearse the minute'st details of that. Remarkable performance! Every blow struck in Israel's behalf on that glo rions day, was a sure title to lasting gratitude and honor in the hearts of ad miring countrymen. Even the forces of animate and inanimate nature come in for their Share of grateful memorial. The river Kishon swept them away, that ancient river, the river Kishon. O my soul, thou hast trodden down strength. There were\\the horse-hoofs broken by the means of the prancings, the prancings of their mighty ones. Sisera having been repulsed in the battle just below Taanach, turned in his ight down the Kishon about eight miles, as far as Harosheth. Here his army, now utterly disorganized by defeat and panic, was crowded into a narrow pass, - a mere Slaughter pen, - where, mingled in horrible, helpless confusion, horses, chariots and men were Slain and trampled in the mire by the pursuing victors while thousands either rushed, or were forced into the Kishon, then swollen, swift and irresistible with its wintry inundation, and were swept away to inevitable death. And here it was that the last foe met his doom. It was a scene in which war realized its most terrific horrors. And yet the poem extols the trampling cavalry, and the rapid Kishon, for their agency in consummating the 'entire ruin of the alien army. It was in the recollection of that awful scene, of which she was an eye witness, and in the consciousness of her own participation therein by personal presence and prayer, that the prophetess, as if she her self had done it, exclaimed, O my soul, thou hast trodden down strength.
