The US economy is set to enjoy solid though not spectacular performance this year
Optimism has dimmed since October with retail sales and consumer demand faltering
Businesses face threats to profitability on multiple fronts

Both domestic and external demand are slowing
Effects from tax cuts have mostly faded
The increase in wage bills without any pickup in inflation is narrowing business margins
Working age population growth stalling due to demographics
To increase growth potential for the medium-term, firms will have to execute strategic investments that boost productivity
